PUC Grants $1.50 Passes, Elimination Of Tokens

Boosts Allowed To Bulwark CTC Income, Shown To Be Inadequate

By James Ficken
Post Reporter

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday granted Capital Transit Co. straight 10-cent fares and a 25-cent boost in weekly pass prices to $1.50, effective at 5 a. m. Sunday (EDT).

The PUC order eliminates the sale of tokens.

Approximately 675,000 daily streetcar and 450,000 bus riders will pay more than two million dollars annually, but the company, after tax deductions, will add but $1,251,625 to its income, CTC President E. D. Merrill estimated.

The fare hike will affect Maryland suburban pass users, who also will find their total pass prices increased by 25 cents on the following routes: Cabin John and Mount Rainier carlines, and Kensington-Wheaton, Mount Rainier, Riverdale, Community, Greenbelt, East Riverdale and Cheverly bus lines. No changes were made in single trip fares in Maryland.

Tokens To Be Redeemed

Tokens will be redeemed for 8 1/3 cents at CTC's main office and 13 division offices after the order goes into effect Sunday morning, Merrill announced.

If the fare increase brings the company's net annual operating income to more than 7½ per cent of the base rate, the PUC ordered the company to put the excess funds into a "special reserve" to be used in lean years.

(A rate base is a value set on that portion of the company's property from which it is entitled to a "fair return" because it's used for public service. In 1945, the PUC set up a "formula" fixing the base rate as the cost of the property to its original owner, less depreciation.)

The PUC thereby went on record as setting 7½ per cent as a "fair return." During recent public hearings on the rate raise proposal, the company said it needed not less than a 10 per cent return.

With Great Reluctance

PUC said it had approved the "substantial" changes in the rate structure "with great reluctance."

"However," PUC said, "failure of the company to meet promptly all of its financial obligations, because of a deficiency in earnings, would soon impair its credit standing, with a resultant detrimental effect upon the type of service it renders in the District of Columbia."

People's Counsel John O'Dea expressed approval of the PUC action. "I believe the company showed they were losing money and couldn't give people adequate service without a raise of this size," he said.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison, PUC special assistant, said a petition for reconsideration from any "interested party" could hold up the fare increase unless PUC immediately ruled against reopening the case.

If PUC denied such a petition, and the "interested party" appealed the case in District Court, the fare increase would become effective pending court action on the matter, he revealed.

$200,000 In Red This Year

"We're certainly pleased that the commission granted our petition for an adjustment in fares," Merrill said. "Since the first of the year, we have run in the red to the tune of about $200,000."

"It will take a little time to feel the effects of the new rate, but it should enable us to stay on the right side of the ledger if operating expenses remain at the present level," he added.

He said the company appreciated "those of our patrons who expressed understanding of our financial difficulties" at the time of the hearing. "We'll continue our efforts to maintain a transit system second to none."

The local transit fare structure was last changed January 31, 1943, when PUC ordered the company to sell tokens three for 25c instead of six for 50 cents.

The present rates of 10-cent

British Laborite Is Winner in Election

London, May 8 (U.P.).—Labor retained its Commons seat for the Jarrow division of Durham County today, but by a sharply reduced majority as well as a reduced total vote.

Ernest Fernyhaugh, Labor, won the seat with 20,694 votes against 13,078 for Williams Scott, Conservative, and 1114 for Wilfred Moody, Independent Socialist. In the 1945 election, the late Ellen Wilkinson, Minister of Health—a strong and respected candidate—polled 22,656 votes for Labor against 11,649 for a liberal national candidate.

Long Distance Strikers Settle For $4.40 Rise

BULLETIN

New York, May 8 (U.P.).—The executive board of the American Union of Telephone Workers tonight ratified an agreement reached in Washington today ending the 32-day Nation-wide walkout of long distance telephone operators.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The long-lines phases of the Nation-wide telephone strike was settled yesterday for a $4.40 a week average increase in pay.

As a result, Labor Department officials were optimistic that the walkout, which marked its thirty-second day yesterday, would now quickly end.

Approximately one third of the 340,000 phone workers of all types who joined in the strike have now settled their disputes with the Bell System subsidiaries.

Still to be resolved are the disputes of 28 unions and Bell companies. Most important of these involve Western Electric and three unions.

In Washington, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. announced that the commercial, plant and accounting department operated on a "normal basis" yesterday, indicating that the great majority of 3000 members of the District Federation of Telephone Workers had returned to their jobs.

The federation settled Wednesday for a $2 to $4 a week increase in pay. The wage adjustment will go into effect Sunday if management and union officially agree that work stoppages by federation members have ended in all exchanges here.

Intensive conciliation discussions were continued yesterday by C&P and the Washington Telephone Traffic Union, whose 3000 operators are still out on the picket lines. Sessions were resumed at 10 p. m. The operators are asking a weekly pay raise of $6.

The long-lines settlement, covering 22,000 long-distance workers in 42 States, was announced early yesterday by American Telephone

Kunkel Grabs $2000 Check After 830 Eat

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Reporter

Two ballrooms full of women—830 of them to be exact—serenaded bachelor Congressman John Crain Kunkel yesterday with "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

But the wealthy legislator-banker made good his escape from the Hotel Statler, still unbetrothed but with a $2000 luncheon check in his hand.

Washington has had its bonus marches, pacifist marches and almost every other kind of mission, but never anything quite like yesterday's descent from Dauphin County, Pennsylvania.

Down from Dauphin they came in a special train—complete with a nurse to give first aid when and if needed—for the purpose of telling their tall, bespectacled, gray-haired and somewhat abashed congressman how much they love him.

Get Excursion Rate

A $10 ticket covered round-trip rail fare, coffee and doughnuts for breakfast en route, and sightseeing tours by bus to the White House, Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol, Hains Point and the Zoo.

But lunch was on Kunkel, and it took the Presidential and Congressional Rooms of the Statler combined to accommodate "the ladies who love Kunkel."

Even that arrangement left an overflow of 27 excursionists who had to eat in the Embassy Room downstairs. But they hurried up in time for the speeches.

Decorating their blouses with "Kunkel" ribbons, the battalion representing the Dauphin County Council of Republican Women had pulled out of Harrisburg in 10 railway coaches at 5:30 a. m. yesterday. Most of the women were middle-aged, although there were appreciable numbers in the 20's and 70's.

Miss Elizabeth Eicherly, the nurse, said she had nothing more difficult to treat than a few bruises from missteps while sightseeing in the morning. After lunch, the

Split Develops Over Palestine Inquiry Set-up

All of Big 5 Except Russia Would Stay Aloof From Commission

Lake Success, N. Y., May 8 (A.P.).—The big western powers and China tried to beg off late today from serving on a proposed United Nations Palestine inquiry commission. They were in complete disagreement with Russia on the role the great powers should play in U. N. attempts to solve the problems of the Holy Land.

In a series of fast-moving developments, the Political Committee of the U. N. Special Assembly heard:

1. The United State, China and Britain declare they did not believe the inquiry committee should include the five great powers because of the varied interests involved.

2. Russia stated in unequivocal terms that the committee should be made up of the five great powers plus six other nations by geographical distribution.

3. The acceptance by the Arab higher committee of the Assembly's invitation to appear before the Political Committee and make a statement for the Arabs of Palestine.

4. The lead-off statement from the Jewish Agency for Palestine pleading for prompt and substantial Jewish immigration to the Holy Land.

Governors To Protest Interior Cut

Westerners Request Hearing; Stefan Attacks Harriman, Marshall Statements

Opposition to congressional cuts in funds for Federal agencies mounted yesterday while reports of further cuts went the rounds of Capitol Hill.

Developments were:

1. Governors of 10 Western States prepared to descend on Washington to plead personally before the Senate subcommittee on Interior Department appropriations for continued reclamation development.

More Postoffice Funds Asked

2. Charges by Secretary of State Marshall and Secretary of Commerce Harriman that proposed cuts for their departments would seriously hamper their work brought an angry retort from Representative Stefan (R., Nebr.) of the House Appropriations Committee. Stefan said the State Department's cultural division was a "nest of alien-minded radicals" and labeled Harriman's protest "a cheap play to small business."

3. President Truman asked Congress for an additional $10,924,000 to operate the Postoffice Department until June 30, on the heels of a charge Wednesday by Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee that the Postoffice Department was making a "brazen" attempt to blame Congress for curtailments of mail service.

Further Cuts Rumored

4. Reports circulated that a House Appropriations Subcommittee would recommend a further cut in the War Department budget of 5½ per cent. Chairman Engel (R., Mich.) of the subcommittee termed the report untrue, but declined to comment on whether his subcommittee would recommend a further cut or how much it might be.

Gov. Mon C. Walgren of Washington telegraphed the Senate Interior Subcommittee asking to appear after a Seattle conference of Western Governors adopted a resolution calling on the Senate to restore House cuts in funds for reclamation. Gov. Sam Ford of Montana, chairman of the Missouri River States Committee, already had planned to appear before the committee May 16.

Two Ask Restoration

The committee yesterday heard Walter S. Hallanan, Republican National Committeeman for West Virginia, urge restoration of $250,000 for Interior's oil and gas division which the House had cut from the appropriation bill. William Zemmerman, jr., assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, asked the subcommittee to restore 11 million dollars cut by the House from the bureau's funds.

Representative Stefan, chairman of a House Appropriations Subcommittee which recommended 23 per cent cuts in State, Commerce and Justice appropriations, took violent issue with Secretaries Marshall and Harriman in a statement which Chairman Taber (R., N. Y.) of the full committee echoed. Interior Secretary Krug and Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach also had complained of reductions in budgets for their departments.

"It makes no difference," Stefan said, "whether the cuts are 5 cents

Hunger Is Rampant

Clay Threatens Use of Troops To Seize Food for Germans

Berlin, May 8 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in chief, announced today he would call out his troops if necessary to seize surplus foodstuffs which farmers refuse to turn in for the benefit of their hungry, dangerously restive fellow Germans.

The food shortage in the American and British zones—especially the highly industrialized British area—had reached the crisis point today, the second anniversary of the end of the European war. Strikes and threatened strikes were the open sign of German feeling.

Clay said he hoped the use of troops would not be necessary.

But the food situation was acutely serious—so serious that in the British zone a virtual news blackout was imposed. In Hamburg, Germany's second city, with 1,700,000 people, 6000 shipyard workers went back to their jobs after a sitdown protest yesterday. However, all but essential industries are to shut down in Hamburg tomorrow.

Both the American and British zones officially allot 1550 calories a day, but the allotments are not being met. Recent reports from the British zone say that there the ration had actually dropped to 800 calories.

In the American zone, most Frankfurt butcher shops had been closed for two weeks. Germans queued outside horsemeat shops at 3 a. m. Crowds glared resentfully at Jewish butcher shops, which had full rations. A woman was heard mutterintg that her husband had had to stop work because of lack of food to keep up his strength.

Clay said that imports, especially of bread grain, from the United States must arrive on time, and pressure must be kept on German farmers to turn in their surplus stocks.

Clay indicated he was worried over the possibility of a cut in wheat imports from America. However, he said, both the State and War Departments were cooperating fully.

"Washington has a problem," he said. "There are several other food-short countries in the world now that must be given assistance too."

Desperate in Britain

London, May 8 (U.P.).—The Earl of Huntingdon, parliamentary secretary to the Agriculture Ministry, told the House of Lords today that British farmers would fall more than 20 per cent short of their wheat goal and there would be "extreme shortages" in meat and vegetables this year.

Answering critics who placed the onus of food shortages upon the government, Huntingdon blamed the severe winter, early spring floods and labor shortages. He virtually admitted Lord Woolton's statement that Britain's position was "desperate."

Unrest in France

Paris, May 8 (A.P.).—Rumblings of unrest over lack of bread came from provincial centers of France today.

Workers at points, beginning with the northern coal mines and tracing a line across the center of the country, protested against lack of food by quitting their posts or demonstrating.

Paris newspapers said several thousand in Nevers, 135 miles southwest of Paris, manhandled the prefect and occupied the prefecture grounds for a time yesterday.

Food demonstrations took place at Nantiat, near Limoges; Angouleme, northeast of Bordeaux. In Montlucon, near Nevers; at coal mines near Lille, and at St. Dizier, steel center east of Paris.

Union Control Over Welfare Funds Limited

Senate GOP Beats Down Opposition, Tightens Labor Bill

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

With Republican leadership once again riding high, the Senate yesterday adopted a GOP-sponsored amendment to tighten up the pending labor bill.

The main effect of the new section, accepted by a vote of 48 to 40, is to render illegal all employer-supported welfare funds which are subject to the sole control of a union.

Any person, employer or union member, who violates the prohibition against union-dominated funds is made subject to a fine of $10,000 and a year in jail.

The amendment was fought on the Senate floor by Senators Morse (R., Oreg.) and Ives (N. Y.). But the surprise victory they won the previous day, when they successfully beat down another amendment which would have discouraged industry-wide bargaining, was not repeated.

Taft Leads Proponents

Instead, the proponents of the amendment, led by Senators Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, and Ball (R., Minn.), won the votes of 33 members of their own party, plus 15 Democrats, to provide a comfortable margin of victory.

Fourteen Republicans, half of them "freshmen," and 26 Democrats were on the losing side.

Later, the Senate agreed to vote at 1 p. m. today on the fourth and last amendment to be offered under Republican leadership auspices. As originally submitted by Ball, it would render jurisdictional, other outlaw strikes and secondary boycotts subject to injunction.

But Taft offered a substitute

Truman Takes Look at World At 63, Likes It

Still an Optimist, 'Sure' of Eventual Lasting Peace

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

On his sixty-third birthday, Presiden Truman took a look at the world yesterday and found it not too bad.

The Chief Executive told reporters at a White House news conference that he was still an optimist, and believed that the world eventually will get a peace that will be lasting. He said he was sure of it.

"Mr. President," said Paul Leach, of the Chicago Daily News, "you have been in office a little over two years and you have another birthday. Has your philosophy of life changed any?"

Not the slightest, Mr. Truman answered. He went on to say that the United States has the greatest government in the world, the greatest the world has ever seen. And the more he becomes familiar with it, he said, grinning, the more he likes it—even though it does make a slave of the President.

No Sensations Intended

Thereafter, he answered questions about Myron Taylor, inflation, politics, and quite a few other things, but there was nothing sensational in his replies. He evidently did not intend that there should be.

Mr. Truman was in a jaunty mood as he greeted the reporters in his office. He was wearing a gray suit, gray mottled tie, and in his lapel he had the blue pin of the Thirty-fifth Division, his old World War I outfit. He said he was getting ready for the division's reunion in Kansas City. A bouquet of 63 American Beauty roses, a birthday gift, adorned his desk.

He started off the news conference by recalling that, on his sixty-

Greek-Turk Bill Passes 4 Separate House Tests

Motion to Kill Aid Program Outright Is Shouted Down; Full Passage Seen

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday shouted down a motion to kill outright the President's Greek-Turkish aid program after overriding three separate attempts to restrict it.

The House adjourned overnight without conclusive action, but leaders predicted passage without crippling amendments.

A telegram from Warren R. Austin, delegate to the United Nations, helped sidetrack the first of opposition moves.

Bolsters U. N., Says Austin

Austin wired House Foreign Affairs Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.):

"In my opinion the United States program for aid to Greece and Turkey does not bypass the United Nations.

"On the contrary it would be a most essential act in support of the United Nations Charter and would advance the building of collective security under the United Nations."

Supporters Cheered

Eaton read the telegram before the House started voting on two controversial amendments to give the United Nations a bigger say in the program. One of these would have held up Turkish aid a year, while the U. N. investigated conditions there.

The amendments were howled down so decisively leaders revised their somewhat gloomy outlook for the bill.

A few minutes later Representative George H. Bender (R., Ohio) moved to strike out the enacting clause.

Vote Is 127 to 37

Eaton called for an immediate vote.

"Everyone knows what this amendment does," he shouted. "It kills the bill."

There were a few scattered "ayes" and a thunderous "no."

Representative John Vorys (R., Ohio), a supporter of the bill, demanded a standing count. The motion to kill mustered only 37 votes. The count against was 127.

Temperature Rise Due After Frost In D. C. Suburbs

Near-freezing temperatures and frost were forecast for early today in the suburbs and a low of 38 degrees was predicted for the city. High winds, which have whipped the Capital for the last two days, will diminish today and the mercury will climb to low 60s, the Weather Bureau reported.

The Metropolitan area dug for blankets and topcoats early yesterday when the temperature dropped to 39 degrees at 5:30 a. m.

The Capital's high winds of Wednesday and yesterday were diminishing late yesterday afternoon and were expected to be moderate today. Yesterday's 39-degree mark equaled the record for the date, but was well over the all-time low for the month, registered on May 11, 1906 when the mercury hit 33 degrees.

Russian Infiltration Protested in Tabriz

Tehran, Iran, May 8 (U.P.).—Official sources said today that businessmen in Tabriz, capital of Azerbaijan, closed their shops yesterday in protest against the alleged unchecked entry of Russian refugees into Azerbaijan.

(A Tehren dispatch to the London newspaper Daily Telegraph said tonight that the Russians reportedly were building military installations on the Iranian islands of Ashurada and Phirouzen in the Caspian Sea. Soviet troops occupied the islands during the war.)

Canada to Give $150,000 For Atomic Research

Toronto, Ontario, May 8 (A.P.).—A. G. L. McNaughton, chairman of Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board, said today $150,000 would be granted three Canadian universities for atomic research studies in medicine, chemistry and other peacetime uses.

Subject to ratification by Parliament, he said, $87,500 will be granted to McGill University, Montreal; $32,500 to the University of British Columbia in Vancouver and $30,000 to the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon.

May Tried to Keep Acrobat Out of Army, Court Is Told

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Andrew Jackson May once tried to keep an acrobat out of the Army, so his team wouldn't be broken up.

The jury that is trying May in the District Court for bribery and conspiracy heard this story yesterday. It happened during the war, when the Army was crying for men and May was a Congressman and chairman of the House Military Committee.

Back in those days the draft board sent out letters by the million, letters that told fellows to report for induction or else. Now, one of those letters was headed straight for an acrobat named Lee, or something of the sort.

There were a couple of other fellows who worked in the act with him, and if he put on a uniform it would break up their troup.

Congressman A. J. May thought it would be too bad to break up the act, and Col. Charles J. Hauck testified yesterday that the Congressman called him right into his office and said so. And the colonel said that when he couldn't see it, the Congressman bawled him out.

The colonel said May felt that he did not have the proper sympathy for the acrobat.

But the scheme to save the troupe really wasn't May's own idea, the colonel said, but came from Murray Garsson and Joseph F. Freeman, who were in May's office at the time.

Prosecutor William A. Paisley told Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut that the deferment effort was one of the little errands that the Garssons and Freeman conspired with May to pay him $50,000 for.

There were big errands, too, such as putting heat on the Army to give the Garsson companies business—which in all added up to more than 78 million dollars.

On trial with May are Murray Garsson, his brother, Henry, and Freeman, who was the Garsson contact man here in Washington.

Prosecutor John T. M. Reddan called Colonel Hauck to the witness stand toward the close of the thirteenth day of the May trial. The colonel said he was assigned

'Holy Alliance' Against Soviet Seen Possible by Va. Senator

Natural Bridge, Va., May 8 (A.P.).—Bluntly warning that complete Communist domination of Europe and large segments of Asia by Moscow-controlled governments would constitute as great a threat to democracy as that made by Hitler, United States Senator A. Willis Robertson tonight told 100 editors and commentators of press and radio that a "holy alliance" might be the last resort if Russia violates covenants and wrecks the United Nations.

In an address which was broadcast nationally, Senator Robertson said "The Lenin philosophy of world revolution has been altered to contemplate world domination, either directly or by means of controlling Communist-dominated states."

Speaking in his home county of Rockbridge at a banquet given by James Lee & Sons Co., celebrating the completion of the 100-year-old firm's new yarn and carpet mills, Senator Robertson urged his audience to trust the leadership of his friend, Secretary of State George Marshall, because "he is a devout Christian whose life has been motivated by the highest ethical principles."

"A majority of our own people have so lost faith in the fact that God governs the affairs of men that they think another conflict inevitable," Senator Robertson said.

If Russia refuses to live with us in one world, our next best hope for peace will be through a firm alliance with the Christian people to be found in the Western Hemisphere, in continental Europe, Great Britain and her dominions. That will be a last resort if Russia violates the covenants and wrecks the program of the United Nations. . . ."

Calling the recent four-power conference in Moscow "a failure," Senator Robertson continued:

"We have no fear of an immediate war with Russia. In the last war she not only lost millions of men, but the destruction of property in Russia leaves her at present without the potential production essential to make war. In addition to that, we and our democratic allies control 85 per cent of the essential raw materials and their processing facilities, while Russia and her satellites control only the remaining 15 per cent. Our fear of Russia, therefore, must of necessity be based upon the strength which Russia may develop 10, 15 or 20 years from now, plus the fact that within that period she will undobutedly discover the secret of the atomic bomb.

"In our own Government there is a difference of opinion as to whether Russia's fear of us is real or simulated. Yet because of a real fear, or for the purpose of delaying a peace program while they drain the resources of Germany and Austria for the rebuilding of Russia, the Russian leaders point to our possession of the atomic bomb, our air forces in central Europe, troops in the Near East and unilateral control of Japan as evidences of imperialistic designs."

State Dept. Warning

Romania Will Lose U. S. Aid If Grain Is Sent to Russia

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

United States aid to famine-ridden Romania will be stopped if that country is found to be exporting grain to Russia, a State Department official said yesterday.

This threat followed announcement that Russia had demanded 400 carloads of white flour from Romania to feed Red army occupation forces. The announcement said it was advised Romania was about to meet the demand and deliver the flour.

While the Russian demand was technically within provisions of the Romanian armistice and American agreements with Romania, it was felt here to be unreasonable in view of Romania's predicament There was a feeling that much responsibility for starvation in Romania could be traced to past Soviet demands for food.

Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, told a news conference that press reports of food exports from Romania to Russia were being carefully checked.

"If they are true," he declared, "we will have no recourse except to cut off shipments of grain to Romania."

Early this year Romania pledged, in return for an American offer of food at the height of a severe famine, not to export any grain for any purpose. The famine reached its peak last February, when President Truman was informed that 500,000 were starving in the northern province of Moldavia.

The President appealed to the Red Cross to finance and supervise distribution of emergency food supplies in Romania, securing shipment of $3,500,000 in 10-in-1 rations and beans to that country. He also arranged to allocate 88,000 tons of American grain for purchase by Romania on assurance that Romania would:

1. Not use grain for reparations payments.

2. Not export any grain for any purpose.

3. Grant American officials the right to observe distribution of

Doctor Sends Pills toPay For Ties He Didn'tOrder

New Britain, Conn., May 8 (AP).—Dr. John S. Irvin received three neckties, which he had not ordered, and an accompanying bill for $2 in today's mail.

So Dr. Irvin kept the neckwear, and sent this letter to the manufacturer:

"I am sending you $2 worth of pills. They have helped thousands of others. I am sure you will appreciate my thoughtfulness in sending them. Please accept the pills in payment for the ties recently sent me."

Woman Asks Trial To Tell Why She Set House Afire

Essex, Md., May 8 (AP).—After declaring "I did it, yes," Mrs. Carmen Rosalie D'Arcy Hernandez de Chras, 43-year-old Venezuelan, was held under $10,000 bail today on a charge of setting fire to the house of a former dentist acquaintance.

"Will they give me a trial to tell why I did it? I want the opportunity to tell why I did it," the attractive brunette declared.

In court but not called to testify was Dr. Vincent Roca, whose shore cottage burned down Tuesday. Mrs. De Chras was arrested in Baltimore shortly after the fire.

grain, which was to be without discrimination.

The Soviet right to demand food for occupation forces, under which the call for flour was made, will continue until the Romanian treaty now before the Senate is ratified and becomes effective.

Elsewhere food made news when D. A. Fitzerald, secretary general of the International Emergency Food Council here, appealed to President Peron of Argentina to increase grain exports to stave off distress in famine areas. He asked Argentina to increase her exports to one million tons a month in May, June and July.

Fitzerald pointed out that the three-month period would be critical for grain-importing nations, where needs were increased by the bitter winter. The United States and Canada already have contracted for shipment of most of the grain they will have available for export before harvest.

The Agriculture Department, meanwhile, announced supplemental allocations of 97,000 long tons of grain for shipment to shortage areas in May and June. Of this, 9000 tons of corn were earmarked for Romania and 24,000 tons of barley and 9000 of wheat to Germany to replace emergency shipments recently to alleviate an acute feed shortage in Romania.

Of the balance, 7000 tons of oats and 9000 of wheat will go to Switzerland for seed, 36,000 tons of corn (of which 9000 may be rye) to France, and 3000 tons of flour, in wheat equivalent, to Jamaica.

first birthday two years before, he called in the reporters at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and announced that Germany had surrendered.

Recalls Reporters' Rush

He recalled how Merriman Smith of the United Press and Robert Nixon of the International News Service almost broke arms and legs as they rushed for the door on that morning in 1945. Smiling, he said there was not likely to be any rush this time.

Mr. Truman observed that the outlook now, from his point of view, was much improved over what it was two years ago. He then made his remark about the prospect of a lasting peace and a situation where the United Nations will be able to carry out its charter.

At this time in '45, he said, the United Nations was still in the formative stage. He recalled how he went to San Francisco to speak at the first U. N. meeting, how he later went to the Big Three meeting in Potsdam, and how shortly after his return the Japanese ran up the white flag of surrender.

Cites Victory Problems

Looking back at the problems brought on by the victory, he mentioned especially the one growing out of the fact that 12,800,000 Americans were under arms. Their mothers and fathers, he said, wanted them discharged the next day.

Mr. Truman, smiling, said the Nation got over that difficulty and many others. A good many remain to be tackled, he said, and expressed confidence that they would be handled for the best welfare of the country.

He told the reporters that he had not intended to make a speech, but that the recollection of Germany's surrender two years ago had got him started. He offered to answer questions.

Asked how he felt, he said, amidst laughter, that he felt about the same as he did when he came to the United States Senate from Missouri in 1935.

Happy Over Election

"Any comment on the Baltimore election?", a reporter asked referring to the victory of Thomas D'Alesandro, Democratic candidate for mayor.

That, said Mr. Truman, made him very happy, just as the Chicago election did.

"When do you expect a report on universal military training?" he was asked.

The President said he expected the report shortly, and, in answer to another question, said he was going to try to have this session of Congress enact legislation for universal training.

He said he was studying the portal-to-portal bill and would tell reporters how he felt about it after he had the facts.

amendment, omitting this provision. This left the amendment with the principal effect of making such strikes and boycotts the bassi for suits in which injured persons could recover damages.

Under the bill, however, the National Labor Relations Board, has the right to obtain injunctions against these types of stoppages. Ball's amendment would have given the same rgiht to district attorneys, who presumably would have been more responsive to employers' requests for injunctive action.

Attempts were made yesterday to reach a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate on future amendments and reach a final vote on the bill by Tuesday. But Senator Revercomb (W. Va.) objected, and although there were some indications that the bill could be voted on by Wednesday, no definite agreement was reached.

Other provisions of the amendment adopted yesterday would:

1. Prohibit employers from "checking-off" workers' wage payments nito union treasuries as dues, unless each worker first authorized such deductions in writing.

2. Prohibit union leaders from "shaking down" employers for monetary or other payments.

Neither of these two objectives was the subject of much controversy. The debate centered about the welfare fund provision which Taft frankly admitted was drafted with John L. Lewis in mind.

Lewis Seeks Sole Control

The United Mine Workers' leader has a provision for a health and welfare fund in his present contract with the Government. It is built up from a 5 cents "royalty" on each ton of coal mined. Under present arrangements, the Government—as an employer—has an equal voice with Lewis in the administration and disbursement policy of the money pool.

But this agreement ends on June 30, when the mines are returned to private ownership. Before the Government seized the mines, Lewis had demanded sole control of the welfare fund.

Taft pointed out that this fund could become a "war chest" for Lewis. He argued that the man who does the bargaining for the union should not have a personal, or union-political, interest in the fund.

Bids Asked on Tests to Determine Site Of 24-Million Bridge Across Chesapeake

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—The State Roads Commission today asked engineering firms for bids on preliminary tests to determine the exact site of the proposed 24-million-dollar bridge across Chesapeake Bay.

Bids are to be opened at noon, May 20.

The subsurface explorations are to be at Sandy Point in Anne Arundel County, on the west shore, and on Kent Island, the eastern approach in Queen Annes County.

The Roads Commission also announced it would receive bids until May 20 on:

Grading, drainage and asphaltic concrete surfacing of 0.115 miles on the Hagerstown-Myersville-Frederick road (National Pike), beginning 2.5 miles west of Frederick and extending toward that city.

Grading, drainage and macadam surfacing of 2.619 miles of the Swanton-Bittinger road in Garrett County (State Route 496), beginning at the end of the present macadam road about 3 miles north of Swanton and extending north toward Bittenger.

Grading, drainage and concrete surfacing of 0.65 miles of Georgia ave. in Montgomery at the District of Columbia line, beginning at East-West hwy., and extending north to Colesville rd.

Warning on Blue Mold

La Plata, Md., May 8 (AP).—Southern Maryland tobacco growers were alerted today against blue mold after the crop killing disease was reported in Charles County by extension agent P. D. Brown.

Brown said the fungus, or mildew-type disease, was discovered in one of four tobacco plant beds near La Plata.

The agent recommended spraying or dusting with fermate be undertaken immediately by tobacco growers as a preventive against the disease, which first appeared in Maryland in 1930.

However, Brown reported fermate is in short supply and farmers unable to obtain it were advised to consult county agents for substitutes.

Annapolis Talk Set

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—George F. Kennan, director of the policy planning staff of the Department of State will address midshipmen of the first class tomorrow night on "Current Problems in Russo-American Relations."

Officers, civilian instructors and their wives will atend the lecture.

Kennan has held various diplomatic posts, among them counselor to the American embassy at Moscow from May, 1944 to May, 1946. Since his return to the United States, he has been deputy for Foreign Affairs at the National War College.

Jailed in Auto Theft

Frederick, Md., May 8.—Convicted before Magistrate William J. Stoner at Thurmont yeterday, Daniel Francis Shorb, near St. Anthony's, and his father, Frank Shorb, were each sentenced to serve a year in the House of Correction in connection with the theft of the automobile of Paul Alexander of the same community. John Shorb, also a son of Frank, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without a license and was fined $25. The Shorbs were picked up by State police Tuesday after they had wrecked the car of the Rev. John F. Cogan of Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, and then made off with the Alexander machine.

Memorial Contract Let

Frederick, Md., May 8.—Contract for the erection of a memorial to Frederick County World War II dead was awarded last night to a New York firm by the board of managers of Mount Olivet Cemetery. The memorial will be erected in a section of the cemetery reserved as a burial ground for all county servicemen who lost their lives in the recent war. Burials will be without cost and the area will be maintained by the cemetery company.

'Bookmobile' Readied

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—It will be books on wheels at your service in Anne Arundel County in the near future, Esther King of the Anne Arundel County Public Library announced today.

The "Bookmobile," a specially equipped 1000-book capacity truck, will go into service in the county as soon as it can be readied.

Miss King said other counties of the state have ordered bookmobiles, but Anne Arundel's will be the first delivered.

The bookmobiles will be painted uniformly light blue green, with dark blue lettering, bearing a "public library" over a white open book.

Neat Maneuvering

Salisbury, Md., May 8 (AP).—Wade Insley, jr., lost and got back his job as Salisbury City clerk along with a raise in pay in a neat piece of legal maneuvering.

The State legislature had provided the next Salisbury clerk would get a raise in salary, from $2400 to $300. So Insley became "next" by resigning and being reappointed immediately by Mayor E. R. White, jr.

Town Plans Water System

Sharpsburg, Md., May 8 (AP).—This town of 900, without water and sewage facilities, has embarked on plans for a system to cost approximately $70,000.

Mayor Lloyd Delauney announced bids would be opened next month.

With Sharpsburg receiving its share of parimutuel betting taxes and gasoline receipts under new Maryland laws, the mayor said he believed no bond issue will be necessary. He indicated a large number of property owners have agreed to bear their share of the cost.

Editor's Rites Today

Boonsboro, Md., May 8 (AP).—Charles H. Minnebraker, for several decades editor and publisher of the Boonsboro Times, died Tuesday night after a long illness. He was 76.

Minnebraker sold his newspaper several years ago because of ill health. He taught school for a number of years before entering the newspaper business. Survivors include a sister and brother. Funeral services will be held here Friday.

City to Get Armory

Cumberland, Md., May 8 (AP).—Capt. Valery Havard, jr., Naval Reserve director for the Fifth District, told Mayor Thomas Post the construction of a naval armory in Cumberland will begin this month.

Havard said contracts will be let today and construction of the armory will be the first built in the Fifth Naval District since before the war.

The armory will be used by the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve division which has been training at Fort Hill High School.

Jail for Welfare Frauds

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—Judge Joseph Sherbow served notice today he will hand out prison sentences to all persons convicted of defrauding public welfare agencies.

Declaring there is "a feeling of uneasiness in the community" over welfare frauds, the judge said here restitution or payment of small fines is not proving a deterrent.

Jail sentences, Sherbow said, should not only deter future frauds but should help "take off the relief roles those illegally there" when they realize they face imprisonment.

Sherbow immediately followed up his words by sentencing to jail two persons for defrauding the city's department of public welfare.

'Slayer' of Girl Jailed Pending Further Probe

Wise, Va., May 8 (AP).—Bradley Casteel still was held in jail today on "suspicion of murder," but officers said no formal charge had been filed in Wise County against the stocky Army veteran who says he killed and buried a Baltimore girl near Appalachia 6 years ago.

Casteel

Casteel was brought here yesterday after he backed down at the last minute on his offer to show State troopers the place he called "Bone Hollow" where he says he buried a girl named Anne Richardson after shooting her with an Army pistol.

Commonwealth's Attorney John Roberts said the bizarre case would be presented to the next grand jury if further State police investigation of Casteel's story warrants it.

Casteel said he met Anne Richardson in a Baltimore bar while stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and later went AWOL, bringing her with him to Big Stone Gap. Casteel said he shot the girl on July 8, 1941, after she said she wanted to return to Baltimore.

No Anne Richardson is listed as missing by Baltimore police.

Best Mental Age Above 60, Doctor Claims

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—Employers are cuttting themselves out of their best wit and wisdom through the 65-year-old age retirement plan, Dr. W. F. King, director of adult hygiene of the Indian State Board of Health, said today.

"While a man may reach the peak of his physical powers between 25 and 50—I don't care where you fix it, he does not reach the peak of his mental powers until he has passed 60," Dr. King said.

"His years of experience increase his usefulness," he said. "Every man is the product of his yesterdays."

"Senility is no more an inevitable part of increasing years than is ricketts an inevitable part of childhood," Dr. King told members of the Maryland Health Department at their twenty-seventh conference.

There is no reason why a man should not continue self-supporting and even productive to the age of 75 or 80 or beyond, he said.

"We found in Indiana one industry where a dozen men were employed, none younger than 60 years," he pointed out. "The employer is very much pleased by the results he gets."

"We are becoming an older people, and we must acquire a changed attitude toward those above 65," Dr. King said.

Md. Dairy Firm, Head Are Fined In Butter Case

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—South Mountain Dairies, Inc., of Middletown, Md., and company president Alex Eisenberg of Brooklyn, N. Y., faced fines totaling $20,000 today on a conviction several months ago of selling butter at above-ceiling prices.

Federal Court Judge W. Calvin Chesnut fined the company and Eisenberg $10,000 each here yesterday on convictions of overcharging customers approximately $2800 during the years 1943-45.

Prosecutor James S. Morrow, jr., said the overcharges ranged from 4 to 7 cents a pound.

A former OPA investigator told the court the firm's total overcharges were about $33,000.

Morrow requested the court to impose a heavy fine on Eisenberg and a lighter one on the company. He said Eisenberg was responsible for the overcharges and was the one who profited from them.

Samuel Kaneff, secretary-treasurer of the firm, also was convicted of the charges, but Judge Chesnut granted his motion for a new trial on grounds of insufficient evidence.

LADIES

delegation had its picture taken on the Capitol steps.

Kunkel himself selected the luncheon entree—creamed chicken. Later he confessed that he was overwhelmed by the demonstration and delighted with the women's gift—a combination radio-phonograph whose maiden record was "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," with the girls joining in on the chorus.

A squad of Kunkel's House colleagues trooped up to the table's microphone to tell the guests what a topnotcher they have representing them. Among those contributing verbal posies were Representatives Gamble, Wolcott, Clearance Brown, Leonard W. Hall, Arends, St. George, Jennings, Andresen, Gross and Halleck—all Republicans, of course.

Then came Senator Martin, Thye, McCarthy and Williams to tell the ladies what they already are convinced of—that Representative Kunkel is quite a guy. The girls almost tore down the hall when the Tennessee Jennings, better known as "Judge," told them "this is the most beautiful audience I've ever addressed in my life."

Mrs. Edward Martin, wife of the Pennsylvania Senator, was Kunkel's hostess for the occasion. She received a pen and pencil set as a gift from the Dauphin County girls, who left for home early last night after their whirlwind courtship of "the man we love."

Beginning with his first election to Congress in 1938 and continuing until the war's outbreak, Kunkel had played luncheon host to comparatively small groups of his women constituents once a year. Each succeeding year the number of guests was a little larger.

There will be another party next year, he indicated. But if the group is much bigger, he'll have to hire Union Station concourse or the National Guard Armory for the affair.

Rotarians to Be Hosts

The faculty and senior class of the Herndon (Va.) High School will be guests of the Herndon Rotary Club at a banquet today at 7 p. m. in the Masonic Hall.

Validity of Parking Meters Challenged in Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—Three Annapolitans attacked the validity of a city ordinance dealing with parking meters today in a civil suit in the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court.

The action was brought by Edwin E. Bangert, Louis Schenker and Nathan Greenberg, who contended installing the parking meters constituted double taxation on motorists.

They also contended the meters were installed to raise revenue rather than regulate traffic and that the ordinance was invalid because it failed to give clear, definite guidance on installation.

Judges James Boylan and James Clark of the Fifth Judicial District sustained the city's objections to questions concerning the total amount and disposition of fines for parking meter violations and to statements made on the council floor as to possible revenue.

Mayor William U. McCready of Annapolis was the first witness called. He testified the city installed the meters to regulate traffic and that he favored devoting 20 per cent of the net return to parks, playgrounds and recreation.

The mayor said the meters had cost the city $26,174.

Attorney Noah A. Hillman, counsel for the plaintiffs along with Eugene Childs, read a statement showing the city took in $47,133 from the meters from their installation in March, 1946 to last April 30.

Roland Brown told the court the meters were installed about a foot from the curb, making it hard to walk on some streets.

Schenker testified the meters had hurt his business and were a public nuisance. Bangert said the meters "interfered with business."

New Surgery For Insane Demonstrated

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—A woman who has been in and out of mental hospitals 20 years with manic depression told some 100 doctors and laymen at Spring Grove State Hospital today a prefrontal lobotomy operation "has given me a new life."

She was among four unidentified patients at the State institution who presented case histories at the hospital's 150th anniversary celebration.

"I was practically raised in a hospital," she said. "Now I am home with my husband and three children—and I don't know what they'd do without me."

Dr. Abraham Schneidmuhl, who led the case presentation and discussion, said Spring Grove has had 28 prefrontal lobotomies performed at Johns Hopkins Hospital since last July.

"Of these, two recovered remarkably well, 13 are able to be at home, though unemployed, two died, an dthe rest are at the hospital," he said. "All but six of the hospital patients are much improved," he said.

Spring Grove, the third oldest mental hospital in the United States, also presented a case demonstration of shock therapy in which it pioneered.

Dr. Gertrude J. Fleischmann gave the shock therapy to a 53-year-old woman, who was able to go home for five years after the last treatment.

The patient, who volunteered for the demonstration, has been at Spring Grove two years this time, but may be able to return home after this series of treatments.

Shock therapy enables the depressive patient to return to normal life for a varied period of time, but is not a permanent cure, Dr. Fleischmann said.

It also allows the psychiatrist to give the patient psychotherapy immediately after he awakens from the shock, she said.

It is little help to the schizophrenic except as a diagnosis, she added.

Third Brig Trial Today

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Frank Hertel will serve as judge advocate and Cmdr. James B. Denton as his counsel at the court martial hearing Saturday morning of a West Virginia marine charged with mistreating prisoners in the Seventh River Naval Command Brig.

PFC Arthur E. Fannin, jr., 21, of Logan, W. Va., one of the six accused in the case will be defended by Myron G. Ehrlich, a Washington, D. C. lawyer.

Denton served s judge advocate in the trial of two prveious defendants. The court records in these instances are being reviewed by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., academy superintendent and Severn River commandant.

Fanning, a former guard in the brig, is charged by the Navy with "maltreatment of persons subject to his order" and "conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline."

Specifications allege that he burned a prisoner on the chest and back with a lighted cigarette, beat two of them with a leather belt, struck two, and threatened a prisoner.

J. M. Pohlhaus Dies; Labor Commissioner

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—John M. Pohlhaus, Maryland Commissioner of Labor and Statistics, died today in Maryland General Hospital, after being stricken while campaigning for the election of Thomas D'Alesandro as mayor of Baltimore.

Although he complained of illness election eve, the 59-year-old commissioner remained active until last night when he was taken to the hospital where his sickness was diagnosed as pneumonia.

Pohlhaus was appointed labor commissioner by Former Governor Herbert R. O'Conor in 1942. He served four years as magistrate in Northeastern Police Court during the term of Former Governor Albert C. Ritchie.

Pohlhaus twice was an unsuccessful candidate for the Third District seat in Congress. Both times he was defeated by Former Representative Vincent L. Palmisano who was succeeded by D'Alesandro.

In private life he operated a grocery store.

New Mr. Guard Unit To Be Activated

The Cannon Company of the 115th Infantry, Maryland National Guard, will be activitated tonight at 8 o'clock in the Kensington, (Md.) Armory, Lieut. Daniel Musgrave, public relations officer of the Maryland National Guard, announced yesterday.

The new unit will be inspected by War Department officials and Capt. Richard M. Ellis, jr., of 7920 Chelton rd., Bethesda, who will command the 23-man company. The authorized strength of the outfit is 97 men, Lieutenant Musgrave said.

U. S. and Chile Reach Air Line Agreement

Santiago, Chile, May 8 (U.P.).—The United States and Chile have concluded negotiations for a commercial aviation treaty which will be signed here Saturday, undersecretary of foreign relations Manuel Trucco announced today.

He said the treaty would give Chilean airlines the same facilities to operate into the United States as United States lines are granted to operate into Chile.

Health Permits Required

Leonardtown, Md., May 8 (AP).—Operators and employes of eating and drinking establishments in St. Marys County will be required to obtain State Department of Health permits under a new ordinance announced today by the Board of County Commissioners.

John H. T. Briscoe, attorney to the commissioners, ruled that a $3 fee could legally be charged applicants for the permits.

Md. Governor, 500 Guests 'Stood Up'

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—The Governor Maryland, 500 dinner guests—at $10 a plate—and 300 spectators waited.

Three and a half hours later, they were still waiting—but Bing Crosby, Al Jolson, Don Ameche and Walter Winchell didn't show up.

The occasion was a benefit dinner last night for cancer and infantile paralysis funds.

William E. Charles of Columbus, Ohio, secretary of the Horseman's Benevolent and Protective Association which sponsored the dinner explained:

Secretary Blamed

"I talked with one of Mr. Winchell's secretaries and I had her assurance then they were all coming. I wrote to Mr. Winchell April 30. I did not get a reply from him.

"No, I did not talk with Crosby, Jolson or Ameche. We had no intention of building up the affair without any basis."

After the long wait, Toastmaster Bill Corum, sports Columnist, finally read a telegram from Winchell which said:

"I tried to make it, but I had to go to the doctor instead."

The Maryland Jockey Club presented a $5000 check to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. Henry A. Parr 3d, club president who made the presentation, said an equal amount would be given to the Maryland branch of the American Cancer Society.

Support Is Urged

Governor Lane urged the diners to support both the cancer and paralysis campaigns. He was accompanied by Maryland Secretary of State John B. Funk.

Winchell's secretary said in New York today he had been hospitalized with a sinus infection.

Al Jolson said he'd never been invited but surely would have been on hand had he known about it.

Crosby and Ameche were not reachable immediately.

New Labor Bills Weighed at CIO Parley in Virginia

Norfolk, Va., May 8 (AP).—Proposed labor legislation—both Federal and State—came up for discussion today at the Virginia CIO Council's seventh annual convention.

Robert A. Johnson, chairman of the legislative committee, presided at the meeting at which Eugene Cotton, assistant counsel of the National CIO, spoke on the national picture.

Proposed labor measures for Virginia came next on the program with representatives from local unions talking on a number of different themes.

Ernest B. Pugh, regional CIO director, reported that in recent months the CIO in Virginia has won 40 bargaining representation elections, lost 5 and tied 1. Pugh said the CIO now has 12 full-time and 54 part-time organizers in the State.

Council President Charles C. Webber recommended that the council establish a standing committee on discrimination and a committee to study relief problems. He also proposed that in the event of a strike by the Virginia Federation of Telephone Workers the Virginia CIO "give all possible moral and financial support."

Backs Central Memorial

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—The American Legion here served notice on the city council last night that it is not going to back down in its demands for a central war memorial for Fredericksburg, including extensive recreational facilities.

The post named W. B. F. Cole, L. W. Houston, H. F. McCurdy, C. L. Jenkins and C. P. Doggett as its delegates to the district American Legion convention at Colonial Beach May 10. It was voted also to appoint a committee to confer with Virginia congressional representatives with regard to expanding the National Cemetery here.

State, Augusta County to Get $325,000 Worth of WAA Equipment in Hospital Shift

Richmond, Va., May 8 (AP).—The Richmond regional office of the War Assets Administration was informed today that agency authorities in Washington had approved the transfer to the State of Virginia and Augusta County of approximately $325,000 worth of equipment at Woodrow Wilson General Hospital.

The equipment—including office, laboratory, kitchen, laundry and bedroom furnishings—would be for use by the State and county in the operation of health and educational facilities at the huge institution.

Charles J. Blair, WAA deputy regional director for real property disposal, said it was expected that the hospital would be turned over to the State and local authorities in time for the fall school term.

Miss Gregory Resigns

Winchester, Va., May 8.—Miss Virginia Gregory has tendered her resignation as director of the Winchester recreation department, effective May 31. Miss Gregory, who came here in 1944 when the city department was set up, has accepted a position on the North Carolina Recreation Commission.

H. B. Cox Fete Set

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—First Christian Church here will pay tribute Sunday to H. Blaine Cox, superintendent of its Bible School for 30 years. A special program is planned to start at 10 a. m.

C. L. Bickers, 73, Dies

Stanardsville, Va., May 8.—Charles L. Bickers, 73, local merchant until his retirement several years ago, died here yesterday after a lengthy illness.

For a number of years he was engaged in the undertaking profession and later operated a grocery store for several years.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mattie Bray Bickers; a daughter, Mrs. R. W. Coppedge, and a son, Myron B. Bickers, all of this town.

Funeral services will be held at the Grace Episcopal Church here tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

H. F. Byrd, jr., to Talk

Winchester, Va., May 8.—Harry F. Byrd, jr., will be the principal speaker Sunday at the annual Rural Life Services sponsored by the Frederick County Council of Churches and held this year at the Gainesboro Methodist Church. B. F. Strother, president of the council, will preside.

Fire Fund Raised

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—A total of $2064.60 has been raised by the Lions Club of Bowling Green toward the purchase of fire-fighting equipment for the Caroline County seat. The clubmen donated $500 and raised the rest by public subscription.

Big Farm Changes Hands

Culpeper, May 8.—Robert B. Suddith of Washington, formerly of Culpeper, has purchased Madison Farm near Locust Dale, on the Culpeper-Rapidan road. The sale price was reported to be $85,000, covering a 400-acre plot, with dwelling and farm equipment.

Madison Farm was originally the home of the late Horace Twyman, and was bought several years ago by Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius of Horse Shoe Farm, which adjoins, who made many improvements and later sold to Mr. and Mrs. James P. Selvage, present occupants and owners.

Suddith, who lives in Washington while conducting an automobile business in Bethesda, said he will continue to maintain his city residence, using the farm as a summer place. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Suddith of Culpeper.

Plans New Theater

Winchester, Va., May 8.—Herman Hable, president of Hable Theaters, Inc., has been granted a building permit by the city to erect a new theater here at an estimated cost of $100,000. Construction on the theater, which will seat 1400 persons, will start in June, Hable said. Hable enterprises already operate a theater here and one in Washington, D. C.

Will Continue Relief Plan

Virginia Beach, Va., May 8 (AP).—The Garden Club of Virginia, closing its annual meeting, voted yesterday to continue its famine relief project another year, and accepted the invitation of the Alexandria Club to hold its board of directors' meeting there in October.

The decision to continue the relief project followed a report on the Ver Sur Mer project by Mrs. Warner Snider, Leesburg, president of the Fauquier and Loudoun County Garden Club, chairman of the famine relief committee.

Ver Sur Mer is a French village which was bombed in preparation for the landing in Normandie. Mrs. Snider reported magnificent response from most of the 33 clubs to the appeal for contributions for the purchase of food and clothing.

Loses 2 Legs in Mishap

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8 (AP).—Edwin Chewning, 24-year-old Navy veteran of World War II, lost both his legs yesterday in a sawmill accident.

He was knocked into a circular saw by a rolling tie. One leg was severed from his body and the other, badly mangled, was amputated at Mary Washington Hospital here.

Chewning, a resident of Chancellorsville, Spotsylvania County, was working at the time in a sawmill operated by his father, Leslie Chewning, near Eley's Ford.

Winchester, Va., May 8.—State Trooper Carroll A. Seale of Stephens City has been awarded second prize in a State-wide departmental safety program for safety promotional work. First prize was won by Trooper R. E. Thompson of Orange who will be awarded a trip to the national safety convention in Chicago this fall. The awards were for the best safety work accomplished above and beyond the call of routine duty.

Post Editor to Speak

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—Herbert Elliston, editor of The Washington Post, will address a convocation of Mary Washington College students here Wednesday at 8 p. m. His topic will be "The Future of World Government."

Elliston, who will speak in George Washington Hall, will be introduced to the 1500 students by Miss Nancy Heffernan, president of Sigma Tau Chi, honorary commerce fraternity, which sponsors the weekly programs.

Before his talk he will be the guest of the fraternity at a dinner in Seacobeck Hall. Other speakers in the series have included Dr. Tipton R. Snavely, professor of education at the University of Virginia, and Dr. Raymond B. Pinchbeck, dean of the University of Richmond.

Piano Recitals Slated

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—Mary Washington College students will present a series of 10 piano recitals May 9 to 25 for the public, faculty and student body in the auditorium of Monroe Hall. The pianists are pupils of Levin Houston 3d, instructor of music. Three of the concerts will be graduation recitals of the young women, Miss Betty Bane of Marion, Miss Nell Clarke of Montross and Miss Sylvia Francis of Crewe.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Dept. to Fire 3000 in Area June 1

WAR: Officials now say that layoff notices will go to 2000 employes in the departmental service here at the end of this month. Also, another 1000 people in "field" offices here and nearby also will be fired at the same time. At least 3000 jobs here and nearby will be abolished in the mass dismissals that will affect about 45,000 the country-over.

KLUTTZ

And there's a good chance the number will be even greater. A report yesterday had the Engel subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee recommending a 5½ per cent cut in the Army budget. And the major reductions are said t obe aimed at civilian personnel.

If this proves to be true, upwards of 25,000 additional civilian jobs would be threatened—and at least 1500 of them would be here and nearby.

There's also a report on Capitol Hill that the Appropriations Committee will applaud Undersecretary Kenneth C. Royall for his "meat-ax" approach in demoting and firing civilian employes. And it'll be an ominous sign for other agencies if that happens. It's entirely conceivable that an attempt will be made to force the morale-breaking Royall plan on all other Federal agencies.

The Navy already has turned it down in polite but firm language. It's no secret that White House advisors are most concerned over the Royall device to arbitrarily drive out of Government a high percentage of middle and top bracket employes, regardless of their worth and abilities. In fact, at one time Royall hoped to get White House blessings for his project. The Undersecretary had hoped to get the White House to issue a press release on his plan. But Good Government was victorious for once and Royall lost out.

MERIT BOARD: But Good Government will suffer if that board is abolished as now planned. The late President Roosevelt set up the Medal for Merit Board to recognize and make awards to outstanding Federal workers. And Government people need encouragement and recognition in peace as well as wartime.

STATE: Its Office of Information and Cultural Affairs yesterday began to draft plans to force a big bloc of its employes to take immediate vacations. The 600-odd employes here, all of whose jobs would be abolished by the bill before the House, will be told of the plan early next wek.

CIO officials are also working on plans for a 10-million-dollar organization. They have concluded that that amount of money would not be enough to continue foreign broadcasting and pay liquidation costs. There has been a hint that key House Republicans will swing behind a compromise to give the agency 10 million dollars instead of the 30 million it requested.

INTERIOR: The President has issued an order abolishing the Solid Fuels Administration as of June 30. Liquidation of the agency has started already . . .

WHITE HOUSE: The steam shovels and digging in the lawn directly in front of the White House are the beginning of a larger carpenter's shop and furniture storage room in the basement . . .

MARITIME now says it will be forced to place most of its employes on several payless holidays before June 30.

PAY: It's a good bet that the Administration will soon ask Congress for a temporary cost of living increase for Federal workers. Also, that the $10,000 ceiling on the Classification Act be lifted to $15,000. But if this happens, it'll be one of those buck-passing affairs since Administration officials are convinced Congress won't approve any sort of a pay raise bill at this session.

At the moment, GOP leaders have shifted the responsibility to the President. The several pay raise bills that have been introduced in the House have been referred to both the Budget Bureau and Civil Service for comments and recommendations. And a move is on in both agencies to produce a constructive set of pay revisions for the consideration of Congress. But first, the President would have to approve the program.

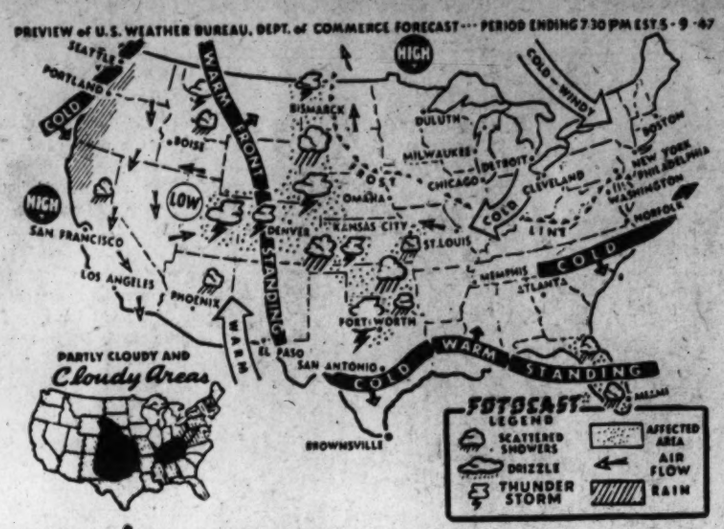
CIVIL SERVICE EXAMS: Training supervisors, $4460 to $7720, for openings at the Naval Gun Factory here . . . dental hygienists, $2168 to $2395, for jobs in Veteran hospitals here and nearby . . . and instructor and chief of corrective physical rehabilitation, $2644 to $4902, for jobs in VA. Go to Civil Service for additional details.

LETTER: "If you think the War Department has no system when it comes to mass firings, then you haven't been around Interior. As of Tuesday, we had no reduction in force registers set up in our offices. Yet career people are being fired with little or no consideration.

. . ."You don't get the same answer from any two personnel people. Generally, there is confusion over the entire reduction procedure. Why doesn't the Civil Service Commission do something about this condition?"

APPEAL: I'm taking this opening again to urge Federal employes who believe they are unjustly fired—make an appeal to the office of John Overholt at Civil Service within 10 days.

National Weather Summary



24-HOUR FORECAST: Weather Bureau Forecasters studied their isobars, charts and air flow arrows and said, "Unseasonably cold weather is in store for the eastern third of the Nation. It will be cold and windy in the Northeast and cold in the Ohio Valley, and the lower Lakes region as cold air from northern Canada flows into this section of the United States." (See air mass and air flow arrows.)

An overcoat will feel comfortable from Maine to Virginia, through the Ohio Valley, the Lakes region and the upper Mississippi Valley Friday morning. Early morning temperatures in these areas will be below 34 degrees. (See frost line on the Fotocast.)

Visible frost will form from New England to Ohio, Virginia and Kentucky. Farmers, gardeners, nurseries and shippers have been warned to protect crops and goods against frost damage in these States.

Showers are expected in southern Florida, Arizona and central California. Rain is predicted from northern California to the Canadian border.

Clear weather is promised Nevada, Idaho, eastern Oregon, the upper Lakes, and along the coast from Massachusetts to northern Florida. (See inset chart.) Considerable cloudiness will envelope Kentucky, Tennessee and the Central Plains.

Minimum temperatures will range from 24 degrees in northern Michigan and Minnesota to 72 at Miami. Highest temperatures predicted for the Nation's cities Friday range from 98 at Las Vegas to 40 in northern Michigan.

Forecast maximum temperatures include Fort Worth 88 degrees, Atlanta 76, St. Louis and Kansas City 70, Nashville 64, Washington 62, New York 60, Philadelphia 58, Boston and Chicago 56, Duluth 52, Milwaukee 50, Detroit 48, Cleveland and Buffalo 46, and Albany 44.

NATIONS

entative, the Political Committee set up a subcommittee of 11 members to work tonight and tomorrow on a draft of instructions for the inquiry group.

Members of the subcommittee are Argentina, Australia, China, Egypt, El Salvador, France, Britain, the United States, Russia, Canada, and Czechoslovakia.

Lester B. Pearson, political committee chairman, said the 55-nation body would meet tomorrow at 3 p. m. (EDT) to receive the report or to hear the Arab group, or both. The trend of the debate showed a strong feeling for a small committee excluding the big five, as advocated by the United States.

Gromyko States Position

After the three powers had pressed to be excused from membership in the inquiry body, Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, said Russia had no material interest in Palestine and no interest in the immigration problem. He said Rusia's only interest was from a political angle, plus the fact that Russia is a member of the U. N., which has now taken over the problem of Palestine.

The Jewish Agency came out strong for relaxation of immigration restrictions in Palestine.

If such a step were allowed by Britain, the agency contended, it would relieve the "menacing tentions" in the Holy Land and provide a calming influence in deliberations of a Palestine inquiry group to be set up by the assembly at this first special session. This was in direct conflict with the Arab position opposing all immigration.

Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, American section chairman of the Jewish Agency executive, became the first non-governmental, representative yet heard by any UN body in the quest for a solution of the Holy Land's problem.

The appearance here of the Arab Higher Committee of Palestine became a certainty when the exiled Mufti of Jerusalem said in Cairo that he had advised the Arab committee's leaders to accept the assembly's invitation to make a statement.

Dr. Silver called for a prompt report from Britain of her stewardship in the Holy Land. Sir Alexander Cadogan replied that Britain stood ready to assist the inquiry committee fully, including a report on the trusteeship.

Dr. Silver urged that the proposed inquiry group visit displaced persons camps in Europe and Palestine.

The first principal interrogator of Silver was Asaf Ali, India, with six questions. They included one on whether there was any reason why the Arabs are resisting immigration now, and another on why British personnel "are being picked off by violence" while on government duty.

or a million dollars, the screams are just as loud.

"This is only part of the tremendous bombardment I've been suffering from all departments during the last several weeks whenever we have requested departments to cut expenditures and help balance the budget. It is only another example of the show these department heads are putting up to embarrass the Appropriations Committee in trying to carry out President Truman's requests.

"These people were fighting the Appropriations Committee before we ever made the appropriations."

Stefan said he did not blame Marshall for the "bal situation" he said the Secretary inherited, but warned him to "beware the wailings of his New Deal underlings." Harriman he handled more forthrightly, declaring his "cries of anguish are in line with the New Dealers' technique."

Bridges Hits 'Propaganda'

Bridges, who had branded as "brazen propaganda" notices he said the Postoffice had sent out to postmasters to cut mail service because Congress had failed to provide funds, drew from the Postoffice Department an admission that Congress had not had an opportunity to act on its appropriation bill.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Order of PUC Increasing Fares of Capital Transit

Text of order issued by Public Utilities Commission increasing transit fares:

Section 1. That the Capital Transit Co. be, and is hereby, authorized to discontinue the sale of tokens and to increase the price of the weekly pass from $1.25 to $1.50.

Section 2. That on and after the time this order becomes effective tokens shall not be valid for transportation on the streetcar and bus lines of the Capital Transit Co.; provided, however, that all such tokens theretofore sold by the company and outstanding in the hands of the public shall be redeemed by the company at the rate of 8 1/3 cents each.

Section 3. That Order No. 2484 be vacated, and that all other orders or parts of orders inconsistent with this order be, and they are hereby, amended accordingly.

Section 4. That, in the event the net operating income of the changes in fare herein authorized hereafter produces during any calendar year an amount in excess of a 7½ per cent return on a weighted rate base, depreciated, to be determined in accordance with the methods and principles set forth in the opinion accompanying this order, such excess amount, after approval by the commission, shall be recorded in a "Special Reserve" to be used, upon approval by the commission, to offset in whole or in part any future deficiency in earnings, or for such other purposes as the commission may find to be in the public interest.

Section 5. That this order shall take effect on and after 5:00 a. m. May 11, 1947.

FARE

straight fare, 8 1/3-cent tokens, and $1.25 weekly pass went into effect November 4, 1937.

Decision Is Unanimous

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said the commission's decision was unanimous. He declined to make a statement regarding the order, saying he preferred to let the commission's 23-page findings "speak for themselves."

In granting the increase, PUC said it was "of the opinion that it is incumbent upon the company to effect operating economies whenever possible, without detracting from the quality of service furnished to its patrons."

"It is significant that the constantly rising operating expenses, due to wage increase and higher material costs, have produced the present unsatisfactory earning position of the company," it stated. "A continuation of this trend, due to these same factors, might well prevent the attainment of the financial stability expected to result from the new rate structure."

Reserve for Lean Years

"In the event that the new fares provide a return in excess of that herein determined to be fair and reasonable," PUC declared, "the commission is of the opinion that such excess should be set aside in a reserve to be available in the event that future years' earnings shall fall short of such a fair return."

"Such a reserve," the order added, "will provide assurance that the public will pay no more than a reasonable return on the property of the company devoted to transportation service."

PUC said it concluded, after careful study, that a return of nine per cent "on the equity capital" of the company "invested in facilities and equipment used in rendering transportation service is fair and reasonable."

to Capitol Hill in 1942, as a contact officer for the Congressman. He had an office in the House Military Committee Rooms, near May's, and it was not long before the Congressman called him in to meet Freeman. Hauck met Murray Garsson, too, and said both he and Freeman were in May's office several times a month all through 1943 and 1944, and less often in 1945.

Hauck said May often would call him in to talk about transfers, assignmen tand promotions for men in the Army. Over a period of four years, Hauck said Murray Garsson and Freemen brought up 15 or 20 cases of this sort, involvin gabout 45 persons, and that May always was in their corner, except for a time in 1945 when he was down in Kentucky.

Plea For Freeman's Son

One of these time, Hauck said, was when May sent Freeman to him t osee what could be done to keep Freeman's son, Albert, from being sent back to duty in the Pacific.

Freeman argued that his son was a volunteer, that he would be a valuable man in the chemical warfore service, in the States, and that family matters following his mother's death required that he not go back overseas.

Hauck told Freeman the Army could not change the son's orders, because they were issued by an overseas commander, but arranged for Brig. Gen. Reber to come to May's office to hear a plea. Reber, who is due t otestify today, arranged for young Freeman to go to Walter Reed Hospital.

& Telegraph Co., parent company of the Bell System, and the American Union of Telephone Workers, key affiliate of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, which called the Nationwide walkout.

Under terms of the settlement, long-distance workers will get increases in base pay of $2 to $4 a week, except in Boston and Buffalo, where some employes will get $5. The raise averages $4.40, including fringe benefits.

The union had asked for a $6 basic increase. Approximately 300 long-lines employes here benefit from the new contract.

In settling the strike, union leaders said that they had asked their members to respect the picket lines of still striking telephone unions. Thus, long distance service will not be back to normal until all local strikes are ended, or unless the long-distance workers disregard picket lines.

C. & P. announced here yesterday that long-distance service was operating at 70 per cent of normal. Nationally, long-distance service is operating at 55 per cent normal, according to A. T. & T.

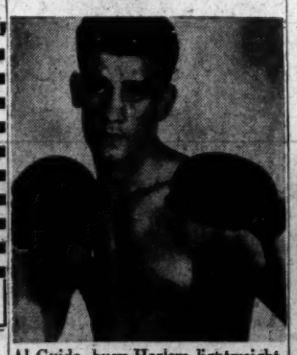
Hot Return Fight on WMAL Tonight



Al Guido, busy Harlem lightweight, tonight attempts for the second time to halt the winning streak of Willie Beltram (above) of the Bronx. Their clash in New York is slated for ten rounds. In a sizzler last March, Guido sent the belting beauty to the canvas twice. Willie, however, was strong in the closing rounds and won the split decision.

Since doffing his Army uniform, Beltram has set a blazing pace and has rolled up an enviable record. A victory over Guido would give him eighteen straight. He's a banging puncher and boxing men know him as a great finisher.

Guido is an experienced hand and has a reputation for carrying destruction in his fists—especially for young ambitions. He's strong, rugged, durable—and has never been knocked out.

School Policy

Who shapes the educational policies of the District school system? We have a Board of Education, appointed by the judges of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia—a board deliberately kept independent of the Board of Commissioners save for budgetary supervision—which is intrusted, nominally at least, with the management of our schools. But the Commissioners have felt called upon to arrogate this function to themselves. The Board of Education, having carefully studied the problem in accordance with a congressional mandate to do so, recommended as a matter of policy the adoption of an approach to the so-called single salary schedule in the payment of District teachers. But the Commissioners have now advised Congress that, in their own infinite wisdom, the single salary schedule does not seem a good idea.

This involves something much more important than the Commissioners' invasion of the policy domain intrusted to the Board of Education. It involves the essential character of the District school system. For if the antiquated, and wholly uninformed, ideas of the Commissioners are to prevail, our children will suffer for it in the form of inferior educational opportunities. The Commissioners are fearful that under the single salary schedule all our teachers will have masters' degrees. This happens to be a groundless fear; but what it amounts to is an aversion to high teaching standards. The caliber of public education in the District cannot rise above the caliber of the professional personnel in the school system. Only through teachers of superior ability shall we be able to keep the District schools in the vanguard of modern educational methods and principles. We hope, therefore, that it will be the Board of Education and not the Board of Commissioners that Congress heeds in legislating on teachers' salaries for this community.

Building Slowdown

Millions of Americans are at present living in substandard houses or in congested quarters. Their pressing need for better accommodation calls for the expenditure of billions of dollars of investment capital and requires the services of millions of men, not only those directly engaged on building projects but also workers in the industries and trades producing and supplying building materials. There are, in addition, large unsatisfied demands for nonresidential building, such as factories, offices, etc., affording direct and indirect opportunities for employment of capital and labor. Hence, given favorable conditions, the construction industry can make a greater contribution to sustained prosperity than any other branch of industry.

Unfortunately rapidly rising production costs have resulted in a slowdown in building activity that reenforces fears that the country may be hastening toward a recession that would bring about a general price collapse, industrial stagnation and mass unemployment. There is considerable difference of opinion as to whether the building setback is primarily due to the rapid rise in material prices, the high level of construction wages, or lowered efficiency of building labor. All three factors, no doubt, account in varying degrees for the sharp over-all cost increases of new construction, estimated at from 70 to 100 per cent of the 1939 cost. In case of single family houses, costs are probably 90 per cent higher than in 1939, without allowing for the effect of material shortages and labor inefficiency.

The costly delays resulting from the uneven flow of building materials, work slowdowns, and reduced productivity on the part of construction workers also make it extremely difficult to estimate building costs in advance. Hence a contractor often hesitates to build because when the job is completed he finds that his costs may be much in excess of estimates. And even if he ventures to go ahead, the completed structure, under the most favorable conditions, is certain to be extremely high priced judged by prewar standards. As a result, construction activity is not only declining and workers being laid off in some areas, but new housing, priced beyond the means of the average buyer, threatens to become a drug on the market.

The remedy for this deplorable situation is, of course, to raise worker efficiency and bring down general construction costs. But how that is to be done is a question to which no satisfactory answer has yet been found. All that can be said with certainty is that without remedial action a good part of the immense backlog of construction that would insure a building boom for some years to come will remain in the blueprint stage.

Dollar-Poor

During the first three months of this year the United States exported 3.6 billion dollars worth of goods. If we were to maintain exports at the same level during the rest of 1947, our export trade would reach the astounding total of 14.4 billion dollars. The 1947 quarterly total breaks all peacetime export records and has been exceeded only once in our history. That was in the second quarter of 1944, the year in which we shipped out close to 14.3 billion dollars of goods. In 1944, however, about 80 per cent of our exports were lend-lease shipments; in the first quarter of this year cash purchases constituted 90 per cent of all exports. During the same period imports amounted to 1.4 billion dollars, likewise an all-time quarterly record, representing an annual import rate of 5.6 billion dollars. Thus, the excess of our exports over our imports reached 2.2 billion dollars during January to March inclusive, indicating an annual rate of 8.8 billion dollars, or four billion more than the favorable trade balance for 1946.

The world still stands in desperate need of the food, raw materials, machinery and other manufactured goods that are being bought in America. For, as Undersecretary of State Acheson said yesterday, most of the countries of Europe and Asia are still in a "state of physical destruction or economic dislocation or both." Furthermore, rehabilitation has been retarded in Europe by crop failures and unprecedentedly bad weather. Two important sources of supply for Europe and Asia, Germany and Japan, are now dependent upon outside aid. Added to these unfavorable factors is the political instability that impedes economic recovery. The net result is that the impoverished peoples of the world turn for succor to the one great nation that has come through the war with its productive machinery not only undamaged but actually geared for higher production.

It is obvious, however, that we cannot continue for long to sell between eight and nine billion dollars more goods to foreign countries than we purchase from them, if those goods have to be paid for in cash. For the gold and dollar assets belonging to the war-damaged purchasing countries have already been drawn upon heavily. And, with UNRRA supplies no longer available, the drain on these diminishing dollar reserves is being accelerated.

A good deal of attention has been given of late to the details of this dollar poverty abroad. The dollar credits advanced to Britain are being used at a much more rapid rate than originally planned. France has also employed a lot of her gold and dollar assets to cover part of her import requirements. Italy is likewise hard pressed. And Stewart Alsop points out in an article, published today on the page opposite that such seemingly prosperous countries as Sweden, Mexico and Canada lost a substantial part of their original gold and dollar holdings during the past year. Chile and Peru are suffering from an increasing shortage of dollars. What they are all doing or thinking of doing by way of protecting themselves is tightening their import controls with a view of cutting down purchases from this country.

On our part there is an alternative which would help to keep up their purchases. We could finance them. Through direct relief, Export-Import Bank loans, the International Bank and International Fund, and the loan to Great Britain, it is estimated that about five billion dollars of the anticipated 1947 export excess can be recovered. That would leave, according to present estimates, close to four billion dollars of excess exports to be paid for from the proceeds of private loans, American remittances abroad, gold and foreign exchange. But that is only for the current year. The pressing demand for our products from war-starved countries will not be satisfied for quite a number of years to come.

We should, therefore, be considering long-range plans for meeting those needs and at the same time for sustaining our export trade. The draft on our resources will, no doubt, diminish as rehabilitation goes forward. Moreover, the countries aided will in time be able to increase their exports to us, and so earn dollars—provided, of course, we are prepared to receive goods in payment. Nevertheless, further financing of hard-pressed foreign countries beyond the amounts already authorized will be essential. The blunt and inescapable fact is that the United States is the only country in a position to meet that financial need, and, if we don't meet it, we shall assuredly be landed with general disorder, political as well as economic.

Night Life

It is a sad, sad story related by Congressman Fred Bradley of Michigan. Party life in Washington, he says, is running him ragged. Mr. Bradley apparently is a Representative of that species rare to the Capital—a man who likes his sleep and is concerned about his efficiency the next morning. Accordingly he is unimpressed by lavish outlays and cocktail repartee, and he is particularly resentful of the intrusions on his privacy by persons who insist on inviting him to dinner in order to gain his ear. The ordinary stream of appeals, he complains, is intensified in his case because he is a committee chairman. Thus one can readily sympathize with him reluctantly sipping a manhattan or haggardly nibbling a canape while wishing devoutly that he were home in bed.

This presents indeed a distressing dilemma. Doubtless there are many persons who would rejoice at the prospect of free food and drink; in fact, we know a few who have made quite a lucrative racket of subsisting on other people's largesse. The question, then, is how to substitute them for Mr. Bradley without injuring the social standing of his more gregarious colleagues. Possibly the obvious expedient of merely saying "no" has already occurred to Mr. Bradley and has been discounted for some reason. But a polite refusal has much to commend it, and Mr. Bradley may have to sacrifice his qualms for his sleep. If he is unversed in the art of negatives, perhaps Gromyko could be induced to cooperate in giving him a few lessons.

A stony silence of this type, with an occasional veto thrown in for good measure, should be sufficient to ward off all but the most indefatigable hostesses. That is, of course, unless this new pose should render Mr. Bradley a man of mystery and make him more popular than ever. In that unhappy event, the only thing we could prescribe for Mr. Bradley's perplexing predicament would be a lengthy scientific course in how to lose friends and alienate people.

Tempest At Western

The only reproach that can justly be brought against Mr. Nathaniel Danowski, the principal of Western High School, is one of political naivete. As far as we can make out, Mr. Danowski, in inviting Mrs. Alexandra Lewis to address the students on the subject of education in Soviet Russia, acted in perfect good faith. She was, it seems, only one of a number of speakers, among them East Indians, Norwegians, Japanese and Serbians, who, from time to time, had told the students about the life of young people in their countries. None of these speakers had said anything untoward, and none of the addresses had aroused any attention outside the school, and perhaps only perfunctory attention there.

Mrs. Lewis, however, managed to explode a little dynamite. About two thirds of the way through her address she abruptly departed from her announced topic and began to draw highly unfavorable comparisons between the Russian and American political and economic systems. She had never, she said, fully appreciated the superiority of the Russian way of life until she came to live in the United States. Whereas in Russia the education, health and general welfare of every citizen was solicitously and scrupulously watched over by the government, in the United States "you have to work hard in order to live; use all your courage not to die." In Russia there are no greedy landlords or profit hungry businessmen, and everything is public property, and so on. In short, the final section of Mrs. Lewis' address sounded exactly as though it had been dictated by Mr. Illya Ehrenberg. If it was Mrs. Lewis' purpose, as it probably was, to make the students dissatisfied with their own manner of living, and to long for Communist government here, it certainly failed. There was mounting indignation on the part of both students and faculty members who listened to her, and on the part of Mr. Danowski himself for what he considered a breach of her agreement not to mention politics or to discuss economic policy. But he was also, and as the sequel proved quite properly, concerned with possible repercussions and unfavorable publicity for the school. Four students had already walked out of the assembly hall and were parading outside with placards inviting Mrs. Lewis to go back to Russia. Mr. Danowski confiscated the placards, but the fat was already in the fire.

While we agree with the student council that the best thing would be to consider the incident closed with Mr. Danowski's explanation and apology, there is some indication that Messrs. Rankin, Dirksen and others will seek to work it into a cause celebre. There is no doubt, of course, that Mrs. Lewis was blatantly and industriously plugging the Communist party line. But the moral, as we see it, is that school principals, hereafter, should take pains to inquire very carefully into the antecedents and associations of outside lecturers before inviting them to speak on a subject so heavily charged with political and emotional dynamite.

World Bank

The prospect that the first loan is about to be made by the World Bank is an encouraging sign that the institution is all set for business. The Bank is somewhat late in getting started. But in the case of banks and world institutions no time is ill-spent and no trouble too much in creating a sound and permanent foundation. That this has been done is the testimony of the new vice president, Mr. Robert L. Garner, in his speech in Boston. "We found," said Mr. Garner, "that the Bank was well organized with a staff of some 200. The key personnel represents an experienced group drawn from various countries. For instance, of the heads of the eight departments into which the organization is divided, four are American, two Canadian, one French and one Dutch. All these men, as well as the remainder of the staff, have been carefully chosen solely on their record of experience and performance." This is what augurs well for the World Bank as it swings into its lending operations. It will add to the Bank's prestige in the minds of both investors and clients.

Yale Slighted

I feel a mite of sympathy with the complaint of Mr. Hugh Auchincloss (letter published May 1) as regards favoritism of the Department of State toward Harvard graduates. Mr. Auchincloss, of course, is a Yale man.

I, too, have sensed evidences of partiality and even conspiracy in many quarters. A year ago I had two luncheon guests at my favorite feeding ground. When the waiter approached my table I said, "Waiter, for three days you have served me Harvard beets twice a day. My guests today are Yale men and we must have Yale beets." He scurried to the kitchen and a moment later returned to inform me, "The cook he say he have no Yale beets today," which was as much as to say that he had shown his neutrality at times by serving Yale beets, which was not true at all.

I think Mr. Auchincloss easily can console himself by taking account of the universal use of Yale locks to bar Harvard men from so many places.

Arlington Schools

What is the strange twist in the "credo Virginianus" that makes a self-satisfied minority of Arlingtonians believe that:

1. The school bond issue is being espoused by itinerants who will move away leaving the natives holding the bag—and the bonds—when shopping centers are being built all over the county by conservative businessmen to cater to a larger future population?

2. An elected school board would put the schools into politics, when the present Administration solicits $100 donations to perpetuate itself in office, and teachers have to sign resolutions condemning the referendum and whisper to their friends the way they really feel about the issue?

3. That low school taxes attract home owners, when the best argument that Washington and Maryland realty salesmen can put up is to point to the hillbilly schools across the river?

4. That Arlington parents who take their children to District schools will not tarry there to do their shopping?

5. That owners of undeveloped tracts are sincere when they say that building costs are too high now. Private builders are putting every available brick into construction now—except for the figurative few they heave at proponents of public projects.

6. That kindergartens are communistic, even when more enlightened communities with kindergartens send men like Taft, Wherry and J. Parnell Thomas to Congress?

7. That the "trimester" system is progressive—when the school system doesn't have enough teachers or rooms for the semester system? First-rate schools discarded the trimester fad 20 years ago.

Could it be that they are afraid to express themselves otherwise, lest more teachers be told to quit P-TA as they did at Patrick Henry School, or walk out on strike like they did at Barcroft last year?

Closed Circle

We need not wonder at the empty-handed return of our Secretary of State from the conference at Moscow, the situation at that capital being no different from that at the other capitals where meetings resulted in no agreements.

Our emissaries accuse the Communist Soviet government of many new and some old aggressions. Their spokesmen accuse the Anglo-Saxon governments of many old and some new aggressions. We retort that we are only acting on the defensive against Russian imperialistic expansionism. They rebut that it is we who are only on the defensive against encirclement by Anglo-Saxon capitalism.

An unrecognized fact that causes the embattled ministers bewilderment is at bottom of the dangerous stalemate that ends the long and heated dialogues. The United Nations cannot succeed or even make reasonable progress while its action is based primarily on the principle of the suppression of aggression. That basis for unity has injected an insurmountable barrier to peace which is patent when it is realized that no distinct line of demarcation can be drawn between aggression and defense which will satisfy both sides. No one can tell where defense ends and aggression begins, or when aggression is actually defense. It is a veritable closed circle and the diplomats are constrained to run around in it as constructively as the ambitious squirrel in a revolving cage.

It takes a lot of dullness of mind to believe that a solid one-world can be built and held together on the principle of the suppression of aggression when the very act of its suppression is in itself a form of aggression. Ordinary good sense should bring the conclusion that as a peace formula aggression and defense cancel themselves out in rank ambiguity.

"Crime Hides Principles"

Your editorial of May 7 criticizing the opinion of the Supreme Court in Harris versus United States, the recent search and seizure decision, under the title "Crime Hides Principle," and, in the text, as a "resort to expediency," ignores a good deal of law which hitherto was never questioned.

The fact of the matter is that the courts and the profession have long recognized the validity of a search incident to a lawful arrest, where such a search was undertaken to uncover the fruits or instrumentalities of the crime. On this point the English decisions accord with those in America. The agents' search in the Harris case, as the record shows, went no further.

If Harris had concealed the contraband draft cards on his person, the Fourth Amendment would not have protected him from search nor the cards from seizure. If a murderer carries a lethal weapon in his pocket, the decision in the Harris case will not immunize that weapon from seizure simply because he has the presence of mind, when he hears the policemen on the stairs, to place it under some shirts in the dresser in the next room.

All this was heretofore considered well settled. It should not therefore occasion surprise that the court was unwilling to accept the thesis suggested by your editorial, which is in substance that a man's bureau drawers have a higher degree of constitutional sanctity than his underdrawers.

Pro-Russian Speech

I see that four students walked out of the Western High School auditorium during school hours because they heard something they didn't want to hear.

I also see that the principal of the school did not defend decadent democracy by talking of freedom of speech and the right of the students to learn of all ways of life. I am happy to see that, instead of disciplining the students, he apologized abjectly for not having censored the speech beforehand to keep dangerous thoughts from delicate ears.

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association hit the nail on the head when, according to The Post, it asked for an investigation "of the laxity in the method of appointing such educators who would allow such information to be brought to the attention of high school pupils."

Three cheers, a hip-hooray and a loud "heil" for the Columbia Heights Citizens under the able tutelage of Mr. Clifford Newell. They realize, of course, that Thomas Jefferson, a decadent parlor-pink, was acting as an enemy agent when he inserted freedom of speech in that dangerous manifesto, the United States Constitution.

All Americans should know that people who think—people who are allowed to see more than one side of a picture—are dangerous. We can't have Americans going around thinking. We must tighten up on our thought control to prevent such incidents in the future.

For when people are allowed to hear both sides and then make up their own minds, there is grave danger of democracy.

I wish to commend the four Western High School seniors who walked out on the Communist talk by Mrs. Lewis. They deserve a big hand from the rest of the teen-agers who have long had to take the brunt of people's comment for their lack of sense and responsibility.

These students have proved to the public that we teen-agers have minds of our own and we use our right to express opinions. I salute them for recognizing what they knew to be wrong—and doing something about it!

PAULA SUE BURNS.

If these students had been asked to listen to a speech on the glories of free enterprise, written by a lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, as we all are asked to do on sundry and frequent occasions, that would, of course have stirred no protest from the citizens association!

Why should we be so fearful unless we guiltily believe we as parents have failed in helping our children appreciate the struggles and aspirations that have gone into building a great democracy?

MRS. SCANLON GARDESCU.

As I sat in the assembly I was proud to be a student of so liberal and so truly American a school. A few weeks ago, Billy Repaid, described as "a noted radio commentator and anti-Communist," forcefully expressed his belief that Communism was detrimental to the American way of life. Monday in the very same place stood Mrs. Lewis, a Russian woman and an excellent speaker, who pictured her life in Russia.

In this way, two opposite views concerning one of the most vital questions of today were presented in our school assembly. Mr. Repaid's was followed by a substantial ovation. Unfortunately, the second one was not received as agreeably, and was followed by a strike that was intended to represent the "patriotism of American youth" (it more accurately portrayed the eagerness of American youth to find an excuse for getting out of class). Have these poor, deluded people so little faith in America that they fear a 35-minute discussion of Russia, its economics and politics, will undermine our high school students?

I was glad to see that The Post presented an accurate report of the walkout at Western High School. Western is getting more bad publicity out of this incident than it deserves, as there were only a few who did walk out, and most Westerners deplore the actions of that minority.

It is too bad that people aren't willing to listen to both sides of the story. GEORGIA HOTTON.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Election Test

AN ELECTION that is coming up in the near future promises to provide a significant test on at least two of the issues troubling most Americans in this time of world unrest.

Much has been made of the Democratic victory in the Chicago mayoralty election and of the very close contest in Wisconsin's normally Republican Second District. But what happens in the Third Congressional District in the State of Washington is likely to get even more notice.

A Republican, Fred Norman, was elected last November. He died suddenly during the debate on the labor bill in the House. The primary election is set for May 17, and on June 7 an election will be held to fill the now vacant seat.

In many ways the primary contest is as hot as the election campaign promises to be. The Democrat rated as likely to win is Smith Troy, the attorney general of the State. Troy was reelected attorney general in 1944, while he was fighting in France with the famous Thirty-sixth Division. He has gone all out for the Truman Doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey to confine Soviet expansionism.

HIS DEMOCRATIC opponent in the primary is Charles R. Savage, who represented the Third District for one term until he was defeated by Norman. Savage, in his congressional career, was closely associated with a Congressman from a neighboring district, Hugh De Lacy. De Lacy was also defeated last fall, in a bitter contest in which he was charged with being a Communist fellow-traveler.

IN New World, his weekly paper, De Lacy announced recently, with a banner headline, that Savage was a follower of Henry Wallace and was opposed to the Greek-Turkish program. While Savage qualified this somewhat in an interview, as contrasted to Troy he is in opposition to the Truman proposal. Thus, the coming Democratic primary should give some indication of opinion on this all-important issue.

There is no such sharp division in the Republican primary. The candidates are Russell Mack, publisher of a paper in Hoquiam, and State Senator Herbert Sieler. They are both in the regular Republican tradition.

When it comes to the choice between a Republican and a Democratic candidate, the Democrats will work hard to focus attention on the drastic cuts in congressional appropriations for public power, for reclamation and soil conservation. They will put the blame on the Republican majority in Congress.

REPUBLICAN members of Congress from the great Northwest are insisting that they wanted to prevent the cuts but were powerless to do so. The Democrats, however, intend to make use of a record vote in the House which they take as a test of intention on restoring the money slashed out of the Department of the Interior appropriation. On that vote, Representative Henry M. Jackson was the sole Representative from Washington recorded for restoring the appropriation. Jackson is also Washington's sole Democrat in the House to survive last year's Republican sweep.

The election in the Third District should, therefore, furnish something of a test on the Republican economy program. While the Republicans from the Northwest may seek to qualify their own stand, it is clear that the Republican Congress is following a definite pattern in clipping each request that comes from the Administration. More often than not, this is done with an ax rather than a pair of shears.

The Northwest is particularly vulnerable on the issue of appropriations for public power and reclamation. The tradition of public power out there goes down to the grass roots of local granges and the trade unions.

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, most articulate of the Republican liberals in the Senate, is leading a fight to restore the cuts in the appropriation to complete the Bonneville Dam project. Morse says that the big new aluminum plants actually need more power than is now available. He is frank in saying it is an issue between private power interests in the East and public power to develop the great Northwest.

The final vote on Bonneville and the other cuts will come before June 7. They will be closely studied by the voters who must decide Washington's significant contest.

Jacques Duclos

By Joachim Joesten

Red Whip Of France

FRANCE IS the only country this side of the "iron curtain" where the Communists hold a plurality in parliament. What is more, they achieved this preponderance in a perfectly free and democratic election last November 10, when they edged ahead of George Bidault's Popular Republican Party (MRP). From all indications, their voting strength and influence are still rising.

This remarkable state of affairs bespeaks, if nothing else, the dynamic quality of the French Communist Party leadership. In most other democratic countries, the Communists are a forlorn flock of some weight in the big cities because of their lung power and infiltration tactics, but without influence in the country, poorly led and usually divided against themselves. In France, they are a real mass party, as solidly entrenched in the sleepy villages of Provence as in the teeming suburbs of Paris. A compact, militant, spirited force—potentially the greatest of all threats to the survival of Western democracy.

Two men, working smoothly and efficiently together, share control of the French Communist Party. One is the burly, bull-necked, boisterous Maurice Thorez; the other is the pudgy, pugnacious and pedantic Jacques Duclos.

Thorez is the showman, the front, the nominal head of the party. Until he was ousted this week he was deputy premier in Paul Ramadier's coalition government, as in preceding cabinets.

Duclos is the power behind the throne, the wire-puller, the backstage operator: the real boss of the party.

Thorez is the brawn; Duclos is the brain.

THE POWER and influence of Jacques Duclos transcends the borders of France with her million of Communist Party members and 5,500,000 Communist voters. He is also the tutor and taskmaster of western communism. When he cracks the whip, prominent comrades in foreign countries wince and wilt.

It was Duclos who put the skids under Earl Browder two years ago. An article "On the Dissolution of the Communist Party of the United States," published by him in the April, 1945, issue of Cahiers du Communism, hit party headquarters in New York with the force of a papal bull.

In French political life, Duclos is renowned for his sharp wit and tart tongue. He is not a typical intellectual, though, but a self-educated man of the people. His roots are where the real strength of France lies—in the country, and, although he has spent most of his time in Paris, he has always kept his ears close to the ground.

Jacques Duclos hails from Louey, a small village in the Hautes-Pyrenees, close to the Spanish border, where he was born on October 2, 1896. At the age of 12, the boy was compelled to leave school in order to earn a living; he took a job as a barber's apprentice. A few months after the outbreak of World War I, he was drafted into the army. He was wounded at Verdun and was taken prisoner by the Germans in 1917.

After the Armistice, Duclos was active in a leftist veterans' organization and in 1920 he joined the newly formed French Communist Party, which at the time was long on literary talent—Anatole France and Henri Barbusse among others—but short on political leadership. Duclos decided that his own figure—which then was not nearly as rotund as it is today—would nicely fill the gap.

THE PRINCIPAL landmarks in his steady climb to the top of the party are the years 1926, when he became a member of its central committee, and 1931, which brought his election as secretary general.

From 1926 to 1932, Duclos sat in the Chamber of Deputies, where he distinguished himself as an able speaker and parliamentary technician. He was returned to the chamber in 1936 as representative of the Seine Department.

Shortly after the outbreak of war in 1939, the Communist members of Parliament, who, on orders from Moscow, had opposed France's entry into the "imperialist war," were rounded up for internment. With a few of his comrades in the chamber, Duclos managed to escape immediate arrest, but he was seized in May, 1940. After a short stay at the Ole de Re concentration camp, he was released on account of his previous war record.

No sooner had he been granted provision liberty, than the capitulation of France and the establishment of the Vichy regime drove him underground again. As a leader of the "Francs-Tireurs," Duclos became one of the principal driving forces behind the Resistance and he played an important part in the Paris uprising of August, 1944.

AFTER THE liberation of France, Duclos resumed his role as whip of the Communist Party; which emerged from the struggle manifold stronger than it had ever been before. The wartime alliance between the Communists and de Gaullists broke down at the first test of peace and a bitter antagonism developed.

Duclos, in particular, frequently tilted with the general. One of their earliest clashes resulted from de Gaulle's reluctance to pardon Thorez, who, since his conviction as a deserter from the army in October, 1939, had been living in Moscow. Eventually Duclos prevailed on the head of the provisional government to grant Thorez the amnesty permitting his return to Paris in December, 1944.

If de Gaulle had hoped to conciliate the Communists with this gesture, he was sadly mistaken. Now he had two wild men on his hands and they contrived to make things so tough for him that he was forced to resign in January, 1946. The crisis, which had been brewing for some time, was brought to a head by a speech delivered by Duclos to the central committee of his party, in which he urged the formation of a Socialist-Communist coalition government.

Duclos, principal engineer of de Gaulle's downfall, did not want the premiership for himself. From the first, he boosted his good friend Thorez for the job. But the other parties didn't "march" for a Communist premier, as the French say, and Thorez had to content himself with a vice premiership in each of four successive cabinets.

WHEN SOCIALIST Vincent Auriol, on January 16, 1947, was elected first president of the Fourth Republic, the formal announcement to the joint session of Parliament at Versailles was delivered by Duclos in his capacity as vice president of the National Assembly. Adjusting his heavy, dark-rimmed glasses to his fleshy nose, Duclos planted himself firmly before a microphoe and read from a scroll: "Vincent Auriol having obtained an absolute majority of the votes cast, I proclaim him President of the Republic for seven years, beginning today." It was the first time in history that a democratic chief of state had been inaugurated by a Communist.

Jacques Duclos certainly doesn't look the part he actually plays as chief mentor of Western communism. With his potbelly, his shiningly bald pate, his florid, mustachioed face, and his merry, twinkling eyes, he resembles a prosperous businessman on a spree rather than an adept of revolutionary Marxism.

His attire, too, is anything but revolutionary. A baggy business suit, a white collar with a dotted or striped tie, and a fedora painfully too small for his vast cranial circumference form his usual garb. Drape the tricolor around his paunch and you have the classical French small town mayor.

Part Time Cleric Jailed For Marrying Minor

Winchester, Tenn., May 8 (AP).—A 61-year-old farmer and part time minister was in jail today on charges brought by the father of a 13-year-old girl he married five days ago without consent of the parents.

Sheriff Jim Smith said warrants were sworn out by Joe Rolman following the marriage of R. S. Holt and his daughter Alline, who he said is not quite 14. He said Holt was divorced from his former wife, to whom he had been married for 40 years, last Thursday.

Philippines Bar Russians

Manila, May 8 (AP).—Admission of Russians into the Philippines has been suspending pending recognition of the Philippine republic by Russia, Immigration Commissioner Engracio Fabre disclosed today. He added that a similar policy would be applied to other nations which have no amity relations with hte Philippines.

Egypt's Envoy Asked About Loan From U. S.

Cairo, Egypt, May 8 (U.P.).—The Minister of Finance said today that Egypt's Ambassador to Washington had been asked whether he carried out his instructions to request an 88 million dollar loan, payable over the next 15 years, from the United States.

Abdel Meguid Badr Pasha, Finance Minister, said Premier Mohamoud Fahmy Pasha had instructed Ambassador Mohamound Hassan Pasha to see about getting the loan, but had not heard the result. The Arabic newspaper Al Mispa said the United States had not answered the request yet.

Turk Named to U. N. Post

Ankara, Turkey, May 8 (U.P.).—Ambassador to Rome Selim Sarper has been appointed permanent Turkish delegate to the United Nations, it was announced today.

Dissident Senators

By Mark Sullivan

Does Labor Bill Vote Mark Cleavage?

SIXTEEN Republican Senators out of 47 voting is a formidable proportion, almost a third. When the 16 voted against Senator Taft's leadership on a major provision of a major measure, the labor bill, their action was likely to be looked upon as a possible beginning of a real party cleavage. If the 16 continue to act contrary to party leadership, and if they remain more or less coherent as a group having a common point of view, the term "cleavage" will be justified.

Sullivan

An obvious question is the extent to which these dissenting Senators reflect Republican sentiment, or public opinion as a whole, in their respective States. No confident answer is possible, though there will be much argument about it. Some clew might be found in a comparison with the votes of Republican members of the House from the same States on the labor bill as a whole. But any such comparison is subject to a serious qualification. There is no necessary relation, sufficient to justify inference, between the votes of Republican members of the House on the House's labor bill as a whole, and the votes of Republican Senators on a single proposed amendment to the Senate version of the bill.

FOR SUCH weight as the comparison may have, an example is Massachusetts. The two Republican Senators from that State, Saltonstall and Lodge, voted against an amendment advocated by Senator Taft as party leader, an amendment which would have made the bill stronger. But the Republican leader of the House, Representative Martin, is also from Massachusetts, and he took leadership in bringing about passage of a strong labor bill, containing an even stronger provision than the one dealing with the same point which Senator Taft advocated in the Senate. Another example is New York. Republican Senator Ives of that State took a large part in the opposition to the Taft amendment. But from the same State 21 Republicans in the House voted for the strong House bill, with only 3 opposing.

Whether Republican sentiment is represented by Senator Taft and the 30 Republicans who voted with him, or by the 16 Republicans who voted in opposition, will be much debated and will have a bearing next year on the Republican presidential nomination and ensuing election. However, the complete picture of the bearing of labor legislation on next year's presidential situation must wait until after the Senate and House versions of the bill have been adjusted in conference, after a final bill has been laid before President Truman, and after and whether he vetoes or signs.

THE AMENDMENT which Senator Taft and 30 other Republicans supported and which was defeated by one vote after 16 Republicans opposed, aimed at what is called "autonomy of local unions." It would deprive big Nation-wide unions of the power to dictate terms of industry-wide bargaining. The existing condition, which the amendment aimed to change, was described by Senator Taft. Last year the CIO Steel Workers' Union called an industry-wide strike, affecting some 500 plants. In some five or six plants in Ohio, workers who did not obey the call to strike lost the charters of their local unions. The Taft amendment would enable local unions to delegate their bargaining rights to the big Nation-wide unions. But the Nation-wide unions could not force decisions on the local ones.

The opposition to this proposed reduction of the powers of the Nation-wide unions was expressed quite completely by Senator Taylor of Idaho: "If the national labor organization has not power to impose sanctions of any kind upon a subsidiary, how can it hold together? If the parent organization has no power to discipline the local organization at all, to revoke its charter, or even take its funds if it disobeys, if the parent organization has no power to do these things, it would disintegrate completely."

"Disintegrate c o m pletely" mus be taken as an oratorical phrase. One Nation-wide organization, the American Federation of Labor, existed for generations before the Wagner Act in 1935 gave increased power to labor unions and leaders. Reasonable limitation upon the powers they have exercised increasingly during the past 12 years, including power from local unions and individual workers, is all that is contemplated either by the Taft amendment or the pending labor legislation as a whole.

British Housing Fails

London, May 8 (U.P.).—The government, announcing the collapse of its 1947 housing program, said there was no possibility of realizing its January target of 240,000 completed houses this year. The announcement blamed the collase on the severe, prolonged winter weather and its result on industrial production.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Chickens Come Home To Roost

AS IN THE prelude to the Greek-Turkish crisis, the danger signals are going up in Washington. There is almost the same coming and going of worried high officials, the same harassed conferring and unhappy scanning of grim memoranda. The prospect of a world-wide monetary crisis is the cause. And while the mechanics of monetary crisis may be mysterious to all but the experts, the results will be plain enough for everyone to see. The results will be more hunger, more insecurity, a weakening effort to reconstruct, and further political deterioration in many of the key regions of the world.

The cause of the monetary crisis is simple. Of the great producing centers in the world, the war temporarily destroyed Germany, Japan and southeast Asia, and left Britain and western Europe crippled and limping. To all intents and purposes the world's deficits of food, coal and goods have been met, since the war, by exports from the United States. The exports have been paid for in dollars—either dollars loaned by us, or obtained by the consuming countries by sales of gold and American securities. And now the dollars are running out.

During the past year such seemingly prosperous and undamaged countries as Sweden, Mexico and Canada suffered losses of their original gold and dollar holdings equivalent to a third of the total. The war-damaged nations have been more sparing in their purchases, but the situation of France, Italy and other important major European economies will "shortly" become critical, according to an authoritative American estimate, if they cannot find more dollars somewhere. And despite the loan Britain is also caught in the same squeeze; for the coal crisis and bad weather this winter have reduced Britain's productivity, while her customers' poverty prevents her from getting dollars from them to pay for goods from us.

JUST WHEN or how the developing crisis will become acute—whether late this spring, or this summer, or during the fall—no one can as yet predict. But the facts—that the crisis is developing, and developing much faster than even the pessimists had expected—are no longer disputed. That is the meaning of the carefully expressed speech of warning just delivered by Undersecretary of State Dean G. Acheson at Cleveland, Miss.

The increasing tempo of events may be gauged from the March figures for imports and exports. In the month of March, the United States exported more goods than in any month in the country's peacetime history—a total of $1,237,000,000 worth. And of imports, the country took only 444 million dollars' worth—ominously less than earlier in the winter.

In the nineteenth century, economists would have jumped for joy over the "favorable trade balance," which should run close to nine billion dollars for the whole year of 1947. But this so-called "favorable balance" simply means that the whole world desperately needs American goods and coal and food for which it cannot pay. This inability to pay has just been dramatized by a sudden increase of Federal reserve gold holdings by over 150 million dollars in one week—a sure sign that this country's customers are scraping the bottom of the barrel.

More than a fortnight ago, when it became unmistakably apparent that we had again been hoping for the best without preparing for the worst, Administration leaders began to discuss remedial action. The problem has been canvassed at a series of conferences in which Undersecretary Acheson, Budget Director James Webb, Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, President of the World Bank John J. McCloy and members of the President's personal staff have all participated at one time or another. The President himself has weighed the situation carefully, and interim decisions have been reached. These are embodied in Acheson's speech, the tone of which indicates that there is a rather slim hope of delaying the climax of the crisis until late this year or early 1948.

THE FIRST STEP to be taken is to secure from Congress a renewal, beyond June 30 of this year, of the controls by which essential goods are made available for export and directed to the countries most in need of them. This is the only way to avoid an insane competitive scramble.

The second planned step is to bring the World Bank to life—to get the bank to meet the most urgent needs of France and other Western European countries from its present limited funds, and then to raise larger funds for more substantial loans by sale of its bonds. The third step will be to expand the lending power of the American Government, through the Export-Import Bank or some other chosen agency, by a very large sum. Because of the political situation, this third step will almost certainly be delayed until the 1948 session of Congress. Yet it is admitted that this delay may be shockingly costly.

All this will be exceedingly unpleasant for the political sleepwalkers and the "back to normalcy" drum-thumpers. But they, and the country, will have the same choice, on a much larger scale, as in the Greek-Turkish emergency. Either they can provide the few billions immediately necessary to promote political and economic stability in the world. Or they can expect their bellowings for "economy" to be rudely interrupted, by the necessity to pour anywhere from 25 to 40 per cent of the national income into national defense in a world in chaos.

All of which brings to mind the question of a nature loving lady, who asked this correspondent why the newspapers nowadays were so gloomy. Upon being asked, in turn, what there was to write about of a cheerful nature, she replied: "Why not try birds?" Perhaps, at that, it would be better to greet the returning willow warbler, than to have to report on the chickens of an American policy of too little and too late coming hastily but insistently home to roost.

3 Students Killed

North Hartland, Vt., May 8 (AP).—Three Dartmouth College seniors, all war veterans, driving to New Jersey to pick up dates for a weekend "prom," were killed today when their automobile crashed head on into a truck. They were Fred T. Sillars, 24, of Pittsfield, Mass., a former Marine sergeant, and Charles K. Long, 22, of Camden, N. J., and John Lopez, 22, of Lodi N. J., both former ensigns.

Famous Paintings Are Hung in Lobby Of White House

By The Associated Press

Two famous paintings were hung yesterday in the executive lobby of the White House.

One is "The Peacemakers" purchased for $10,000 some three months ago. Painted by George P. A. Healey, about 1868, it depicts President Lincoln, General Grant, General Sherman and Admiral Porter in conference aboard the steamship "River Queen" during the last days of the War Between the States.

The second is "Men of Progress." Painted by Shussele in 1862, it belongs to the National Gallery of Art and was lent to the White House.

It is the artist's idea of a conference of notable inventors and industrial pioneers.

Among those in the picture are Cyrus Hall McCormick, Charles Goodyear, Samuel Morse, Samuel Colt, Robert Hoe and 14 other notables of their time.

Allis Chalmers Firm Leases WAA Factory

Lease of the Gadsden, Ala., ordnance works to the Allis-Chalmers Co., Milwaukee, Wis., for the manufacture of tractors and mechanical cotton pickers was announced today by the War Assets Administration.

The war-built plant covers 337 acres, and Mayor Herbert Meighan of Gadsden, said the company's production schedule calls for employment of 2500 persons in the third year of operation.

The company will pay $75,000 a year rental, but WAA predicted it will exercise its option within the first year to purchase the plant for $575,000.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

For about 10 years, Raymond Patenotre, millionaire grandson of James Elverson, late owner of the Philadelphia Inquirer, has been a voluntary exile from the United States. During at least half of that time, the United States Government has been itching to get its hands on him in connection with an eight-million-dollar tax fraud.

Now, very quietly, Raymond Patenotre has come back to the USA. He slipped in by way of Latin America and has been trying to pry loose three million dollars of his money which the Government has frozen in the vaults of J. P. Morgan.

All this has aroused one of the hottest backstage lobbying battles of recent years.

Despite the fact that the Patenotre family is charged with fraud, and despite the fact that the Treasury Department had recommended Patenotre to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution, even while in exile, certain big-shot lobbyists are now pulling wires to let the family off.

Most interesting thing about the case is the lawyer-tax lobbyist who is going to bat for the Patenotres. He is Ellsworth Alvord, who worked in the Treasury Department under Andy Mellon, and has been successfully practicing tax law.

Government records show that Alvord has been cited by the Treasury for preparing and swearing to a "false and fraudulent document" in connection with the Patenotre income tax. Ordinarily when an attorney prepares a fraudulent document, he is prosecuted for fraud along with his client. However, for one reason or another, Alvord has not been prosecuted.

Canada Revealed Fraud

THE charge of fraud against Alvord is based on the fact that he went to France shortly after 1930 and prepared a tax return for Mrs. Eleanor Patenotre, daughter of James Elverson, stating that her income for the year 1930 was only $28,282.16. That was the year that the Philadelphia Inquirer was sold by the Patenotre family to Moe Annenberg for $10,500,000.

Later came the war, and under a wartime agreement between the United States and Canada, the Canadian government revealed to the United States Treasury that on March 4, 1930 payments were made to the Royal Bank of Canada totaling $10,500,000. This is in contrast to the $28,282 which Mrs. Patenotre reported as income. The deal had been carefully arranged in Canada, the Treasury alleges, in order to avoid taxes. Furthermore, though Mrs. Patenotre claimed she had actually given the Inquirer stock to her son, the records of the bank show that she, not he, got the certificate of deposit from the Royal Bank of Canada.

When the United States Treasury finally unearthed this fact, tax-lobbyist Alvord claimed that his clients were in Vichy, France, where he could not communicate with them. Apparently he forgot about wartime censorship. For the United States censor, opening mail in wartime, intercepted Alvord's letters to the Patenotre family.

Now Raymond Patenotre is back in the USA and a wire-pulling battle royal is going on to see whether the Treasury's earlier fraud charge will or will not be prosecuted.

Hope Diamond On the Loose

FOR several hours the famous Hope diamond and other million-dollar jewels of the late Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean burned in the pockets of Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy.

Immediately after Mrs. McLean died, Murphy and former Judge Thurmond Arnold, executors of the will, had to find a safe place for the jewels—which, incidentally, they had found in shoe boxes in Mrs. McLean's room. It was late Saturday evening, everything was closed and they were unable to persuade any banks to open.

For an hour or so, Murphy and Arnold rode around Washington, the assortment of jewels worth around four million dollars in their pockets or in boxes under their arms. Finally, in desperation, they appealed to J. Edgar Hoover, who opened the FBI safety vault and put them in. It was figured this was the safest place in town.

Note—Diplomatic speculation has it that the Soviet government might eventually buy the Hope diamond. Originally it belonged to Catherine the Great, and the Soviet government is making a collection of her jewels.

Harry Thaw's Will

HARRY THAW, millionaire murderer of Architect Stanford White, has shown a queer way of remembering people in his will. He has left a bequest to English Authoress Clare Sheridan, cousin of Winston Churchill.

The bequest amounts to the large sum of $25.

Mrs. Sheridan, who never met Thaw, says she will give the money to British food relief.

Protecting the Marines

A HUSH-HUSH meeting between General Eisenhower and Marine Corps General Alexander Vandegrift took place recently which may affect the armed forces merger bill.

The Marine Corps Commandant made such a two-fisted appeal to Congress to prevent the Marines being swallowed up by the Army that Eisenhower sent for Vandegrift and asked him to talk things over.

From a leatherneck's point of view, the meeting was not unsuccessful. Eisenhower made at least one major concession: That the mission of the Marine Corps be clearly identified in the future defense setup and Marines continue the amphibious operations which have made the Corps famous for 150 years.

Other points of difference discussed were:

1. The Marine Corps shall remain a separate fighting force under the supervision of the Navy when the Navy is merged into the new Department of National Defense. Eisenhower said he would not oppose this.
2. The Marine Corps wants to be represented on the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the new setup. Eisenhower refused to commit himself on this.
3. Vandegrift asked that the merger legislation provide for a Marine occupation force for foreign duty.

Eisenhower vigorously opposed this latter point on the ground that occupation duty is strictly a job for the Army. Vandegrift didn't press too hard, since he had already won more concessions than he expected. Also, he is willing to take his chances that Congress will give the Marines other concessions, particularly representation on the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Under the Dome

NOT a single California Republican accepted the invitation of Representative Mike Kirwan, Ohio Democrat, to stand up on the House floor if they intended to support the Interior Department Appropriation bill. Kirwan pointed out that California's Republican Governor, Earl Warren, had crossed the country to ask the Appropriations Committee for 40 million dollars for the Central Valley Project—despite which less than one fifth that amount was provided in the bill . . . When it came to the final vote on the Interior bill, only "nay" from California Republicans was that of San Francisco's courageous Congressman, Dick Welch.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM ADOPTED BY THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION 1944.

Don't look now, Mr. Congressman... but your Platform is showing!!!

Remember your last Labor Day speech about a strong, free labor movement being vital to a strong free America?

How does that fit in with what you're doing today?

Both your Houses have brought out bills which, intentionally or not, will cripple American unions.

Labor-management relations have been far from perfect. The public interest has suffered. But Congress should remember that after V-J Day, bargaining machinery had grown rusty from disuse; labor faced 20 to 30% cuts in take-home pay while management wrestled with the problems of reconversion.

Instead of being surprised and shocked that bargaining sometimes collapsed, Congress and the public should now be grateful that a short 18 months later we are witnessing peaceful wage settlements in basic industries. These wage accords prove that labor-management relations in America are basically sound.

Americans for Democratic Action believes that the Taft-Hartley program turns away from the real problems we face as a nation, threatens much of the progress we have made in labor-management relations in this century, and takes us brazenly backward to the days when "freedom" in industry was a one-way street—For Employers Only.

Drastic laws passed in anger in Washington endanger the strong, free American labor movement both parties have sworn to protect and advance, intensify the economic dangers we must seek to avoid, and point to a serious loss of prestige for American democracy here and abroad.

Join ADA and help safeguard Labor's Rights

Americans for Democratic Action is an organization of progressives, dedicated to the achievement of freedom and economic security for all people everywhere, through education and democratic political action.

We believe that rising living standards and lasting peace can be attained by democratic planning, enlargement of fundamental liberties and international cooperation.

We believe that all forms of totalitarianism, including Communism, are incompatible with these objectives. In our crusade for an expanding democracy and against fascism and reaction, we welcome as members of ADA only those whose devotion to the principles of political freedom is unquestioned.

ADA'S LABOR PROGRAM:

We believe a free and democratic labor movement is essential to the effective functioning of democracy. We believe that the basis of successful labor-management relationships is the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing without interference from management.

We are for the preservation and strengthening legislation designed to safeguard these rights.

Accordingly, we oppose such proposals as the elimination of industry-wide bargaining, compulsory arbitration and prohibition of the closed shop. We favor enlarged appropriations for the Department of Labor, including the Labor Education Program and the National Labor Relations Board, and an expansion of the government's role in conciliation, mediation and voluntary arbitration.

In essential industries both management and labor have a special responsibility to settle disputes through collective bargaining.

We further believe it is labor's responsibility to eliminate work stoppages resulting from jurisdictional disputes. Labor should reject the use of secondary boycotts whenever the protection of fair wage standards and working conditions is not at stake. Labor has the responsibility to insure the democratic operation of trade unions.

We urge prompt establishment of a Commission representing management, labor and the public interest, to investigate the long-time relationships of management and labor;

The Gallup Poll

Majority in U. S. Approve Piece-Work as Pay Basis

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 8.—One of the great problems facing nations of the world in this postwar period is production—how to turn out more goods.

In this country production has been put forward as one means of alleviating the inflationary spiral now in progress.

In Britain, production is regarded as the means of salvation for a sorely hurt economy.

In Russia, badly battered during the great German offensive, the emphasis is upon production.

Russia has in fact recently expanded its use of the piece-rate method of reward for work as a means of stimulating production. It has now been expanded to include agricultural workers, who formerly were rewarded on a combination time-and-piece-rate basis.

With this in mind, the Institute conducted a Nation-wide poll among voters to measure beliefs about and sentiment toward "piece-work" payment of a fixed amount for each piece of work done. A similar survey was conducted in Britain by the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Gallup Poll.

The question in the survey:

1. "Do you agree or disagree that production per man must go up before wages can be increased by factories or industry?"

United States
Agree	69%
Disagree	33
No opinion	14
Britain
Agree	59%
Disagree	30
No opinion	11

2. "Do you approve or disapprove of paying for work on piece-work basis?"

United States
Approve	59%
Disapprove	28
No opinion	13
Britain
Approve	50
Disapprove	30
Qualified approval	7
No opinion	13

3. "Do you agree or disagree that payment on a piece-work basis is likely to increase production in most factories?"

United States
Agree	75%
Disagree	13
No opinion	12
Britain
Agree	66%
Disagree	20
No opinion	14

Piecework as a basis for pay has of course a long history both here and abroad.

At the present time it is used in United States with great success in some industries. The garment industry provides one outstanding example. The International Ladies Garment Workers Union estimates that 90 per cent of the garment industry operates on a piecework basis.

Among the rank and file of union members in United States, thinking on today's questions do not differ greatly from the rest of the country, except on the first question—whether wages can go up without production increases.

The union vote on this question shows 38 per cent agreeing that production must go up before wages can be increased, 50 per cent disagreeing, 12 per cent without any opinion on the question.

Fifty-three per cent of union members included in the survey approve of paying for work on a piecework basis. Seventy-three per cent of them agree that payment on such a basis will increase production in most factories.

McMurray Accepts New College Post

Los Angeles, May 8 (AP).—Dr. Howard J. McMurray, former Wisconsin Congressman and member of the political science department at the University of Wisconsin, has accepted directorship of the new curriculum in applied politics and economics at Occidental College, President Arthur G. Coons announced today.

'Merchant' Taken Off School Reading List

Haverhill, Mass., May 8 (AP).—Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" has been taken off the list of required reading for Haverhill High School students at the request of a rabbi.

Protesting that the book caused Jewish students "much discomfort and self-consciousness," Rabbi Abraham I. Jacobson told the school committee:

"The character of Shylock is an exaggerated distortion of Jewish attitudes and conduct."

Underwriters Elect Three New Directors

By S. Oliver Goodman

Three new directors were elected yesterday by members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association.

They are: Charles F. Suter, Berkshire Life; Joseph A. Marr, Penn Mutual, and Chester R. Jones, State Mutual of Worcester. There were six contestants in this race.

Unopposed candidates, who were declared elected, are: William B. Rumple, president; Mr. Suter, first vice president, and William J. McCausland, second vice president.

More than 250 members and guests attended the annual meeting in the ball room of the Mayflower Hotel. Principal speaker was Harry S. Redeker, secretary of Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co., Philadelphia, who pointed out some pitfalls and problems in handling of estates.

Mr. Redeker stressed that in many instances it was inadvisable for property to be held jointly by husband and wife for estates in excess of $60,000. He also urged close coordination of life insurance men, lawyers and trust officers.

W. Neal McCord, retiring president of the underwriters association, said last night that newly elected officials will be installed at a meeting June 12, in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

Peoples Sales Up 5.9%

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported March sales of $3,683,971, a gain of 5.9 per cent over the $3,477,377 in the same 1946 month.

For the first four months this year the chain system's volume aggregated $14,622,693, or 8.9 per cent more than the $13,426,812 in the like 1946 period.

Treasurer W. H. Churchill noted that Peoples operated 133 stores in April, against 130 in the 1946 month.

42 Per Cent of Income for Food

The National Industrial Conference Board said yesterday that "to maintain prewar living standards, families of moderate income in large cities must now devote about 42 per cent of their expenditures to food, as compared with 35 per cent in 1935-39."

It added that "fully 70 per cent of the increase in living costs from June, 1946, the last month of full OPA controls, to February, 1947, was caused by the rise in food prices."

The board, a private research organization supported by business firms, reported that between June, 1946, and March, 1947, retail food prices rose 30 per cent, wholesale prices 49 per cent, and farm products 28 per cent.

The board noted that Americans were eating large quantities of food and more expensive kinds, thereby expanding demand, while the Government was buying food for shipment to relief areas, thereby decreasing the supply available here. These factors combined to boost prices in the commodity markets.

Wholesale Foods Again Off

The Dun & Bradstreet weekly wholesale food price index showed a further slight decline in the week ended May 6, the seventh consecutive drop.

The index, which represents the wholesale price per pound of 31 foods in general use, stood at $6 in the latest period, compared with $6.02 in the previous week and $4.20 on the same date last year. The index has been in a steadily declining trend since March 18, but declines have been narrowing in recent weeks.

That Autograph Habit

New York, May 8.—Margaret O'Brien waited in the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria to get President Aleman's autograph . . . During the crossing of the Queen Elizabeth—which was made memorable by the ship's getting stuck on a sandbar—Beatrice Lillie rang for the steward and asked him: "What time does this place get to England?"

Margaret O'Brien

David O. Selznick, as trustee of the estate of his late brother, Myron Selznick, sold the horse Can't Wait for $17,000. The horse, for which Myron paid $1000, won $100,000 for its owner . . . Whenever Margaret Truman visited the music critics to receive their frank opinions about her voice, she used a pseudonym—"Miss Wallace" . . . George Jessel lunched with his boss, Darryl Zanuck, on the day the papers announced that Prince Paul would succeed his brother, the late King George, as ruler of Greece. Jessel showed the headline of the royal succession to Zanuck, and asked: "Did you okay this?"

Jack Dempsey's two daughters, who have developed into pretty and charming young ladies, never will have any difficulties with boys who get fresh. Dempsey has taught the girls how to box and punch. . . . Ely Culbertson and his bride, Dorothy Baehne, are writing a book—a historical novel to be called "Miraculous Accident." . . . Culbertson, incidentally, has played a few games of bridge with his new wife as his partner. He discussed her predecessor and said: "I have the unique distinction of having been married once to the best bridge player in the world, and once to the worst bridge player in the world."

Oveta Hobby, former head of the WAC, is being urged to enter politics in Texas and run for Congress . . . Max Gordon, the producer, was discussing the remarkable comeback made by Al Jolson and philosophized: "This proves that you should never close up the store" . . . Jolson's old pictures are being exhibited throughout the Midwest to capitalize on the success of the movie, "The Jolson Story." These old films are being advertised "The Real Jolson" . . . The cops came a-running to the Astor Bar one night when shooting was heard there. The bullets were blanks, fired by Ole Olsen of Olsen & Johnson, who had left Nicky Blair's Carnival to attend Sophie Tucker's testimonial dinner at the Astor. The bartender had suggested: "If you do your show here, I'll give you a drink free." Olsen thereupon did his "show."

One of the artists who was signed for the movie, "Carnegie Hall," complained to Producer Boris Morros that he had not been treated fairly. His agent, he explained, had neglected to make one proviso in the film contract, and as a result he is being presented as an inferior artist. "We didn't know that in the movie there were going to be scenes of Carnegie Hall audiences applauding us," said the artist. "Why is it that I, who play for four minutes, get only one minute's applause, while Heifetz, who plays for only one minute, gets four minutes' applause?"

George Jean Nathan was asked recently whether he plans to resign from the Drama Critics Circle because this year's award did not go to O'Neill's "Ice Man Cometh." Nathan replied: "Resign from the Critics Circle? That would be like resigning from Ed Wynn." . . . Fred Allen's flight to Cleveland, to be examined by a heart specialist, was to determine whether he should resume his radio work next season. The doctor assured him he was all right and could work.

Dolores del Rio and Carmen Figueroa were in the Stork Club the other night. A diner at the adjoining table said: "I am thrilled at hearing such excellent Spanish being spoken in a N. Y. club. Permit me to introduce myself." He was Bachiller Alvaro Galvez y Fuentes, Gobernador de la Baja California. This was the first time the Mexican Governor ever had met the Mexican film star . . . Lewis & Dody, the veteran vaudevillians, will record their routines in an album soon to be released . . . In listing the high salaries paid to executives, the film companies have begun to list the amount of United States income taxes on these salaries—in the statements to stockholders.

Robert Burton, who plays Helen Hayes' father in "Happy Birthday," is nursing bruises and abrasions. The prop-bottle of champagne, with which he is hit on the head in the final scene, was mislaid. Louis Jean Hydt, therefore, ad libbed a punch to the jaw and Miss Hayes swung a right to the head . . . Sir Cedric Hardwicke, who played "April Showers" at the Champagne Room's piano in El Morocco recently, was set upon by autograph hunters when he left the club. He signed "Cedric Hardwicke," and was told: "Why don't you put the 'Sir' in?" Hardwicke explained: "Did Bruce Cabot sign his 'Mr. Bruce Cabot?'"

Dialogue is Faintly Bookish

Earle Offers Appealing Horses and Landscape; There's a Romance, Too

By Richard L. Coe

HORSES AND SEX, cherished by film-makers and fans, are the principal ingredients of "Stallion Road," at the Earle.

It is a good-looking picture, but it also is slow moving and sometimes incredible. However, horses and California scenery beautifully photographed always have covered a multitude of man-made sins. That is the cloak under which the Brothers Warner are hiding in this one.

Ronald Reagan

"Stallion Road" also offers two familiar faces in relatively new roles for them. Ronald Reagan plays his first part since leaving the Army and the natural young newspaperman-turned-actor is his old serviceable self.

Alex Smith, whose switch from icy goddesses to sisterly females has been duly heralded by Warner tom-tom beaters, comes off very nicely as the sun-kissed maiden who, garbed in form-fitting tweeds, cherishes horses above mere man.

The story is adapted by Stephen Longstreet from his novel of the same name. Exactly how faithfully he has transcribed his story of a veterinarian we don't know, but many of the lines seem closer to reading matter than authentic conversation. The part of the author, for he is one of the three central characters, is amusing, and if the smart things he has to say sound lit'rary, well, the guy's supposed to be lit'rary, see? Still, it does smaek more of the printed page than natural dialogue.

The story concerns the author's visit to an old college friend who's a vet in California's Madre Valley. When the vet, played by Reagan, is called to a neighboring ranch to look after a sick horse, Author Zachary Scott goes along for the ride. The owner of the horse is Miss Smith.

Romance Contrived

Enter sex. Friendship hesitates, but eventually flies out the window. By now, however, we've learned that the vet is a serious chap; Lord love him, and when there's work to be done in cleaning up a cattle plague of anthrax, he does his duty. Because a predatory female's husband is the owner of the cattle, Miss Smith misconstrues things and promises to wed Scott.

This misunderstanding is more contrived than credible. There's also a contrived little blonde who comforts Scott when all looks black. This banal little scene apparently is left in to convince the audience that though he's a brainy writer, he's also of mortal flesh.

Yes, true love wins out. Reagan catches anthrax himself and the serum he'd been working on to save the horses and cattle pulls him through safely into the arms of Miss Smith.

Because of the slow pace, much of this seems fairly corny. There are the usual children making bets and curious small talk over which the camera lingers lovingly after Director James Kern has figured you've had enough of horses. Patti Brady and Fernando Alvarado make with this cuteness.

For all these limitations, though, "Stallion Road" is beautiful to look at, with its meadows and sea scenes, where, you learn, horses are effectively trained.

The Earle also has another interesting view of natural life, scenes in western Maryland for a sports short on "Wild Turkey." A carton, "Enchanted Square," and the newsreels complete the bill.

"STALLION ROAD," Warner Bros. picture, produced by Alex Gottlieb. Novel and screenplay by Stephen Longstreet. Directed by James V. Kern. At the Earle Theater.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

DETROIT, MAY 8.—That character, Bingo Binks, is hitting a very neat .415 for the Athletics, I see by the papers, and Connie Mack seems to have made the shrewdest deal of the past winter. To obtain Binks from Washington, Mack gave up only a couple of very surplus pitchers who had lost a total of 30 games for him in 1946.

POVICH

The release of a pair of 30-game losers in itself constituted a move calculated to strengthen any club, but Mr. Mack is now discovering he came up with a considerable gent in Binks. Right now he is playing left field for the Athletics and has chased Sam Chapman onto the bench.

It was Chapman the Nats originally wanted from the Athletics in exchange for Binks, but Mr. Mack threw up his hands in horror at that suggestion. Binks for Chapman was high absurdity. After all, Chapman was the best thing in the A's outfield, one of the power men of the league who has hit a gaudy .322 before going into the Navy and in his last two full seasons with the A's outfield, one of the power men two full seasons with the A's had smacked a total of 45 home runs. In contrast, Binks in his three seasons with Washington had averaged two homers per year.

CLARK GRIFFITH and the Nats never did under-rate Binks as a ballplayer, but on the Washington club he represented one more left-handed hitting outfielder on a team that was already overstocked with that type. The Nats tried unsuccessfully o peddle Binks o Cleveland, the Tigers and the White Sox, all of whom viewed him merely as a guy who couldn't make a regular job for himself with Washington.

The Washington players doubt if Binks is destined to play left field for the A's for many more weeks, however. At the first sign of a return to hitting form by Chapman, they think Connie Mack will move Binks into the infield at first base. They don't think there's anybody with the A's who can play the position as well, and they say there are at least three clubs in the league who are crazy for turning Binks down as a first baseman.

Cleveland, which is suffering from complications both in the outfield and third base, once had title to Binks. At least Bill Veeck, the Cleveland owner did. That was at Milwaukee, in 1941, before Veeck presumed he'd ever be a big lague club owner. He sold Binks to Washington after the fellow whacked out a .374 batting average for the Brewers, getting a $25,000 cash price for him.

THE NATS INSTALLED Binks in their outfield and immediately wondered what kind of a guy they had bought. He could hit, they saw that, and he had good hands and could throw and run, but missed so many signs Manager Ossie Bluege took him aside one day and asked him how come, didn't the Milwaukee club use signs. "I enever could tell what them clowns were doing," said Binks, "I just figured things out for myself and did all right."

Back in 1941, Binks chucked the whole baseball business for awhile. Permanently, he thought. After a big year with Cedar Rapids in 1939 when he hit .329, Binks got off to a bad start the next season and after hitting only 211 in 57 games he caught a train for Chicago one midsummer day, grabbed up his old tools, and got a job as a Ford mechanic. That was more fun than hitting .211, he told me.

He'd still be tinkering with flanges and carburetors, he said, if it wasn't for Red Smith, the old football coach, who had the Green Bay club in the Wisconsin State League and needed a first baseman badly in 1940. Smith remembered Binks and telephoned him, please, to try baseball again, and Binks did. Inside of a year he was the hottest article in the American Association with his .374 average that led the Nats to buy him.

WITH THE WASHINGTON club, Binks was the most colorful character since Sheriff Dave Harris, who was similarly given to belting the ears off the good pitchers in the league. Harris ruined two no-hit games for Tommy Bridges, and Binks used to earn his living with the Nats by rapping the best pitching in the league. Hal Newhouser, Bob Feller and Dave Ferriss were his meat. He never batted .300 for the Nats, but against the top pitchers he was murder.

At one point when Bluege benched him against left handed pitching, he couldn't understand it. "What's the difference between left handed and right handed pitching?" Binks used to ask. "I don't see none."

As in the case of Dave Harris, Binks goes to bat accompanied by a complete lack of imagination, which has long been known to be helpful to a hitter. "Smart people are always up there wondering what the pitcher is going to throw," Binks said. "I don't. I just wait until he throws and then if I like it I swing."

It recalled Sheriff Harris' famous crack to Moe Berg, Princeton graduate, master of seven languages, and baseball's great intellectual of his day. As Berg started for the batters box one day, Harris shouted, "good luck Moe, but all of them seven languages you know ain't gonna do you no good now."

Assault Dominates Dixie Handicap Today

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—King Ranch's Assault comes back to the scene of two of his great victories tomorrow and goes after the chief money in the $30,000 added Dixie Handicap. The battle of a mile and three sixteenths features the Preakness-eve program that also boasts the $20,000 added Pimlico Oaks and will give an expected crowd of 25,000 a look-see at the Circle M Farm's Cosmic Missile.

A victory today for Assault, the 1946 triple champion, will send him into third position on the list of all-time money winners. Providing there are no scratches in the field of seven, the race will have a gross value of $35,750 with $24,700 going to the winner.

Assault would displace Calumet's Armed which now has $482,775 to the King Ranch star's $473,770. Victory would put him close to Stymie's $518,285. Whirlaway is tops, of course, with his $561,161.

There is every indication that the King Ranch entry, with Flash Burn going postward with Assault, will be an odds-on choice, probably around 4-to-5. Flash Burn won the Gittings Handicap here last week. While the historic Dixie and the eagerly-sought Oaks were discussed here today the chief talk still centered around the Preakness with C. V. Whitney's Phalanx still ruling a slight favorite over Maine Chance Farm's Jet Pilot, the Derby winner. A field close to ten now is indicated.

Cedar Farm's Mityme was withdrawn today. His handlers did not want to run him back so soon after his driving victory here last Tuesday, The Ridgewood Stable's Double Jay, "off his feed," also was scratched.

Getting back to the Dixie, Assault's liking for the Pimlico track is well known. Last year, he won the Preakness and Pimlico Special over the running surface. Jockey Eddie Arcaro, who rode him in the Special, will be in the saddle tomorrow.

Assault, carrying 129 pounds, must spot his rivals from three to 21 pounds. Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' Natchez, with 126, is given the best chance of the field to upset Assault.

The race is given an international flavor because it will mark an appearance of the South American team of Rico Monte and Talon, trained by Horatio Luro. Ken O'Connor's Statesman and Christiana's Alexis also are slated to take a crack at the champion.

Several Preakness candidates were on the track this morning for speed sharpeners in preparation for Saturday's race. Among the works were:

C. V. Whitney's Phalanx, half in 49 2/5, six furlongs in 1:16.

Mill River Stable's Secnav, mile in 1:42 3/5.

E. O. Stice's On Trust, half in 49 and five furlongs in 1:02.

Calumet Farm's Faultless for a gallop.

Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Bullet Proof for a gallop.

BULLETHEAD HAIGHT.

50-50 Chance of Sun For Preakness

Baltimore, May 8 (AP).—The weather man predicted today that Pimlico has better than a 50-50 chance of no rain and a fast track for Saturday's 57th running of the Preakness.

It was strictly a "long-range" prediction, the weather bureau declared, in forecasting slight frost for tonight, cool winds tomorrow, and warmer Saturday.

Same Nats, Same Snow, 'Snow' Game

Detroit, May 8.—The Nats, wondering when they will find a shining hour to improve, entrained for Washington tonight faced with their fifth consecutive day of idleness.

If forewarned of what has now been three straight postponements, they could have hired out, at least, as baby-sitters.

Today again it snowed in Detroit—not much, but there it was, all mixed up in a chilly young gale and the Tiger management called the scheduled contest off, with excellent judgment.

No game tomorrow in Washington, either.

It's an open date. Saturday afternoon, the Athletics move in for the start of a three-game seri s to be climaxed on Monday with the first night game of the year. Otherwise, there's nothing new.

Jones Tosses One Hitter as Tech Wins, 7-1

Chunky righthander Bobby Jones of McKinley Tech High School, author of a no-hitter against Anacostia earlier this season, turned in a one-hit job yesterday, and helped his teammates club out a 7-1 victory over Wilson's Green Tigers at Wilson.

The triumph, fourth for the Trainers in five interhigh league games, gave them undisputed possession of third place, and virtually assured them of a place in the playoffs. The defeat was the third in a row for the fifth place Wilson team.

Jones, who besides hurling the near-perfect game, cracked a pair of dubles over the short right field fence, shared honors with Billy Werber, jr. Werber, son of the former Red Sox, Athletics, Yankees and Reds third base star, connected for a single and double in three trips, and made a sensational running catch in left field.

Jones, spinning his curve and knuckleball into the teth of a biting wind, set 16 Wilsonites down by strikeouts, Pat O'Neill being the lone Tiger not to fan.

It was O'Neill who spoiled Jones' bid for second no-hitter when he laced a sharp double to the center-field fence. The lone safety followed a walk to Jack Whitcomb and drove in the only Wilson run.

Tec took a one run lead in the first. George Bageant fanned, but reached first as Tom Evans' third strike was a wild pitch. Bill Jones' double over the right-field fence sent Bageant to third, and the latter scored when Evans uncorked another wild pitch.

Three doubles gave Tech two more runs in the second, Ed Clark, Werber and Bob Jones connecting for the two baggers. Four more Trainer runs crossed the plate in the fourth. Jack Baumgartner walked and Werber moved him to second with a single through the box. Bob Jones scored them both with a double. Bob Curtis then walked, and both he and Jones scored as Ed Harris fumbled and then threw wild on Bob Murray's infield tap.

Race Drivers 'Up in Arms'

Chicago, May 8 (U.P.).—Joe Lenki, racing driver and a spokesman for the American Society for Professional Automobile Racing, said today he would take "drastic" action if Indianapolis speedway competition is not opened to aspar drivers in three days.

He said that he had legal grounds to appeal to the courts for an injunction against the running of the Memorial Day race.

The speedway manages the yearly auto race under a contract with the AAA, Lenki said. He could seek a court injunction against the race as a member of the AAA, contending the speedway was not executing its contract obligations.

Whole Town Gets Cy Young Ducats

Cleveland, May 8 (AP).—Wednesday, June 11, will be the day Bill Veeck keeps his promise to Cy Young to bring the whole village of Newcomerstown, Ohio, (population 4564) up to see the Cleveland Indians.

Veeck announced today the selection of the date for "Cy Young Day," honoring the 80-year-old man who was the first pitcher to enter the Hall of Fame.

The promise was made at Young's birthday party March 29, when some 800 Tuscarawas County neighbors of the mound veteran gathered with many baseball figures in Newcomerstown to honor Cy, recalling the 1890 day when he pitched his first no-hitter for the Cleveland Club.

The Indians will have Boston as their opponent on the June 11 date. The Tribe office said today ticket distribution to the citizens of Cy's home town probably would be made through the mayor.

Double X Ends Playing Career

Miami, Fla., May 8 (AP).—Jimmy Foxx, who hit 527 home runs in 24 years of organized baseball, gave up active playing today with the thought that "I was born 10 years too soon, but baseball was mighty good to me."

Genial Jimmy, now 39, whose 58 round-trip blows in 1932 came within two of equaling the 60-mark set by Babe Ruth, recalled that for the seasons of 1931, 1932 and 1933, he was paid a total of $50,000 by the Philadelphia Athletics. "Today I look at the salaries they're getting and I say to myself that I might have been rich."

Foxx, manager of the St. Petersburg club in the Florida International League had to cut the roster to 15 players and Foxx included himself.

Fairfax Routs Monroe

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—Fairfax High School smothered the James Monroe High baseball team here, 19 to 4. Larry Fones, Fairfax hurler, held the locals to four safeties and rapped three hits himself. Fairfax scored eight runs in the fourth inning.

Mack Goes to Newark

Cleveland, May 8 (AP). — Ray Mack, veteran second baseman obtained from the Cleveland Indians, was sent to Newark of the International League today by the New York Yankees.

Babe Hits a 'Homer'

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP).—Babe Ruth hit another home run for "the kids" today when he announced through his attorney the formation of a charitable foundation to be devoted to fostering sports among the underprivileged youth of America.

The exact details as to how the funds will be distributed have been left to the board of directors that includes Commissioner A. B. Chandler, Presidents Will Harridge of the American League and Ford Frick of the National League, Sportswriter Grantland Rice, J. Paul Carey 2d, Emory C. Perry and Melvyn Gordon Lowenstein. Carey and Perry are life-long friends of the Babe and Lowenstein is his attorney.

THE FOUNDATION is Ruth's idea and he has made the first contribution. Scholarships will be provided for sports-minded youngsters who will be encouraged to active participation in athletics.

The foundation, originally mentioned by Ruth himself during the Babe Ruth Day ceremonies April 27 at the Yankee Stadium, will have the backing of baseball. It is possible that the Babe Ruth Day may be an annual event

Terps Beat West Virginia

University of Maryland's baseball club climbed above the .500 mark for the first time this year, defeating West Virginia, 10-3, yesterday at College Park. It was Maryland's seventh victory against six losses.

Joe Fitzpatrick gave the Mountaineers seven scattered hits as he went the route for the Old Liners.

The Terps cemented the victory in the sixth with four runs on five hits and a walk off Mountaineer flinger Ryan who went the route for the West Virginians despite being found for 12 Maryland hits, including three singles by Stuffy Evans and a homer and single by Joe Andrus.

Giants Whip Cincinnati, 7-4

New York, May 8 (AP).—Reliefer Ken Trinkle won his third straight ball game today with the hitting help of Rookie Bobby Thomson as the New York Giants came up with three runs in the eighth to subdue Cincinnati, 7-4, splitting the abbreviated series.

Thomson's fourth homer of the season in the first inning and his two-run triple in the sixth had kept the Giants in the game against Joe Beggs despite home runs by Ray Lamanno in the second and by Bob Usher in the fourth.

After the Reds tied it up 4-4 in the seventh, when a double by Bobby Adams and Lamanno's single knocked out Dave Koslo, Trinkle came on to shut the door.

Thomson scored the tie-breaking run in the eighth when he forced Billy Rigney who opened with a single, took second on a wild pitch and came home on Willard Marshall's single.

Beazley Stops Pirates, 12-5, For Braves

Boston, May 8 (AP).—Hit barrage against three Pittsburgh pitchers, including Rookie Earl Torgeson's third homer in as many games, today enabled Johnny Beazley to win his first start as a Boston Brave with a 12-5 decision over the Pirates.

While sweeping a three-game series, the Tribesmen belted two of their former teammates, starter Nick Strincevich and Elmer Singleton, for 11 of the blows. Hughie Mulcahy finished up for the Bucs.

Beazley, wild in spots and tiring at the finish, gave the Bucs 10 hits, one a four-bagger by Wally Westlake, and seven bases on balls. But that pitching question-mark had little to worry about after Torgie drove into the right-field bullpen with one aboard in the fourth inning to launch a five-run rally.

While hurling the Braves to their tenth home victory in 12 starts, Beazley ended Frankie Gustine's consecutive game hitting streak at the 14-mark.

Shreveport, La., May 8 (AP).—J. Walter Morris, president of the Evangeline League, announced today that Harry Strohm, manager of the New Iberia club, had been fined $25 and suspended for three days because of the use of profanity in the Thibodaux game last night.

Strohm, formerly of Kansas City, Kans., is a former American Association infielder.

Phillies Lose Twice to Cubs

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, using a different method in each game, swept aside the Philadelphia Phillies in both ends of today's double-header. They won the first, 2-1, in a pitching duel and then slugged out an 8-7 conquest in the nightcap.

The opened was a mound duel between Henry Wyse and Fred Schmidt, recently obtained from the Cards and making his first major league start since 1944. Wyse scattered nine hits with the winning run coming in the seventh on two walks, a sacrifice nad Bob Sheffing's single.

Trailing by a 6-2 count in the eighth inning, after the Phils had counted four in the opening frame, the Cubs scored six times on five hits to take the second game. Andy Pafoko's two-run homer, his third of the season, was the big blow of the frame.

Dodger Creed: Help 'Em All Except St. Louis

Rickey's Big Deal With Bucs Only The Beginning

NEW YORK, May 8 (U.P.).—Branch Rickey, master-mind of the front-running Brooklyn Dodgers, was working on a "secret weapon" today in an effort to keep the downtrodden World Champion St. Louis Cardinals from getting on their feet again.

Rickey's idea is to spread the surplus talent he must get off his roster to other clubs in the National League, strengthening them so they will be more difficult to beat.

He emerged with a fat check of more than $200,000 in peddling five players last Saturday to the Pittsburgh Pirates but he was turned down today by the Cincinnati Reds in a similar deal whereby they also would have gotten five players for $200,000 or more.

A spokesman for the Reds said that the club might make a deal with the Dodgers "but not that kind of a deal."

"We've got better players on our ball club than the ones he was trying to sell us," the spokesman said.

"WE HAVE THE BEST young third baseman in baseball in young Grady Hatton," he said. "So why would we want old fellows like Cookie Lavagetto or Arky Vaughan?"

Rickey also has been in consultation with Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, and Lou Perini, boss of the Boston Braves. Lacking a long ball hitter who can break up tight games with homers, Rickey had the audacity to try to get Johnny Mize, the phenomenal slugger of the Giants, who has smashed eight route clouts to date.

The proposition irked Stoneham to such an extent that he hasn't spoken to Rickey since, even though the Brooklyn orator tried his best to point out that a couple of good young pitchers would make the Giants an excellent bet to finish in the first division.

Failing in his efforts to deal with the Giants, Rickey turned to the Pirates and gave them three pitchers, Kirby Higbe, Hank Behrman and Cal McLish; an infielder, Gene Mauch, and a young catcher, Homer Howell, in exchange for the fat check and utility man, Al Gionfriddo.

ALTHOUGH THE LAST laughs usually don't come until September, Rickey could be excused for a little preliminary chuckling over that deal. Defending his liquidation of Higbe, who won 17 games and lost eight for the Dodgers last year, he said that the

DEAR FOLKS:

Doug Dodson, after riding four straight winners at Churchill Downs Wednesday, was an arrival at Pimlico. The Calumet Farm contract jockey checked in here where he will be on the stable's Faultless in the Preakness on Saturday. Russell McDaniel, an exercise boy employed by the stable of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, was slightly injured this morning when Trymenow fell during a workout. Trainer Tom Smith, trainer of Maine Chance Farm's Jet Pilot, the Derby winner, took a walk all around the Pimlico race course today, checking every detail of the track. Smith, always a thorough man in everything he does, wanted to know exactly what sort of racing strip Jet Pilot will run over Saturday. Trainer Willie Molter, who will saddle E. O. Stice's On Trust for the Preakness Saturday, will not arrive on the scene until that morning flying in from Tanforan. Jockey Willie Balzaretti, who will be on Circle M Farm's Riskolater in the Preakness was an arrival and swung into action immediately . . . BILL.

Manola, at $230 for $2, Sets Spring Payoff Record at Pimlico

Longshots Win Both Features

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Upsets marked both of today's big races here but the daddy of all surprises was a victory by a $230.20 (record for this spring in Maryland) shot in the sixth race. Manola, a 7-year-old non-winner, took command early and was there on top at the finish. Away from the races since 1944 before being brought out this spring, Manola was ridden by Jockey Francis Kelly and returned $57.60 to place and $19.60 to show.

Responding to the whip, Mrs. Ella K. Bryson's Equibit closed with a bold rush and won the 39th running of the Pimlico Nursery Stakes, $7500 added feature. By a margin of three parts of a length, Equibit led Cedar Farm's highly regarded Brandy Punch over the line. A half length back came H. A. Perkins' Realtor to be third in the field of five.

$25 to the Lucky

Backers of Equibit in a crowd of 15,000 collected $25 for each $2 investment. The colt, a son of Equator and Long Bit, was clocked in 1:01 2/5 over a fast track, a fifth of a second slower than Jet Pilot's winning effort in the same event last year.

Realtor, a longshot, began as if he were to steal the race, drawing into a daylight lead approaching the stretch. Brandy Punch was on the outside, however, and went up in the stretch. Brandy Punch was wearing down Realtor when Equibit, roused by Jockey Nick Jemas, staged his pay-off rush.

Equibit, winner of one race in seven starts before today, collected earnings of $8095 for the event, bringing his season's total to $10,595.

Winner by 20

Mrs. E. Willing Bromley's Trough Hill was the easiest kind of a winner in the $5000 added Pimlico Maiden Steeplechase. The 5-year-old jogged to the finish line 20 lengths in advance of Mrs. Corliss Sullivan's Allier. A dozen lengths farther back came Brookmeade Stable's Lady Janice to be third. John M. Schiff's Daredine was the only other finisher in the field of nine. Trough Hill, second in his first start here, paid $15.60 and was clocked in 3:58 2-5 for the about 2 miles.

Trough Hill had some early competition from Big Sun but was drawing far out when the latter lost rider at the thirteenth fence. Two horses were eliminated at the second fence when The Heir ran out approaching the wing and carried Night Legend out with him. Three others fell or lost rider. Big Sun was injured while running off after tossing Jockey M. Flynn. Other boys and horses escaped injury.

Jockey T. Field rode the winner which fenced in faultless fashion. The winner's share of the purse was $5200.

Poland Not Quitting Tennis

London, May 8 (U.P.).—Reports that Poland's Davis Cup tennis stars would be unable to compete in the European zone matches against Britain in Warsaw, May 15 t o17, because of difficulty in obtaining visas were denied officially today by a foreign office spokesman.

Labeling the report "sheer nonsense," the spokesman pointed out that Ignacy Tloczynski, Poland's No. 1 player, is a member of the Polish Military Attache's staff with privileges of a diplomat and is "therefore at liberty to come and go as he pleases."

DON O'SULLIVAN, $7.80, $4.20, $2.80; TATU, $4.00, $3.40; BEAUZAR, $10.20.

DON O'SULLIVAN was steadied in the early running, responded to pressure in the stretch and wore down TATU in the final strides. TATU went to the front at once, drew out to a good lead, saved ground and tired right at the close. BEAUZAR, forward factor throughout, came energetically on the outside in the final drive. LONGVALLEY, allowed to race on his own courage for the half, rallied when shaken up and closed fast. RED TORCH went evenly. JAB ME closed some ground. BASS FIDDLE had no excuse. THORMOND had early speed and faltered.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $3500. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:46. Off at 2:46½. Winner, Mrs. S. M. Pistorie's ch. m. (5) by Dauber—Kharina by Challenger II. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value, $2275. Time, 1:14.

MY ANGELA, $8.20, $5.00, $3.80; SEMPER AVANTI, $12.60, $7.80; IDEAL GIFT, $8.00.

MY ANGELA was rated in the first flight, came to the outside in the stretch, disposed of IDEAL GIFT and just lasted while tiring badly under vigorous handling. SEMPER AVANTI, off slowly, rallied in the stretch, had to be taken up behind IDEAL GIFT and closed boldly. IDEAL GIFT, away with first flight, forged to the lead and tired right at the end. FOREVERMINE gained ground and then hung. TAGEL could not reach serious contention. BOGGING BOB had early speed. WOOFIE was through early. PAGE II stopped.

Daily Double—DON O'SULLIVAN and MY ANGELA Paid $24.80.

THIRD RACE—The Back Again. Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $3500. For 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:17. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's br. f. (2) by Bahram—Canfli by Campfire. Trained by D. A. Headley. Value, $2200. Time, 0:55⅘.

AVIATION, $23.60, $4.60, $2.20; CHRISTMASTIDE, $2.60, $2.20; MARK UP, $2.20.

AVIATION went to the front between horses soon after the break, drew out and held on gamely in the final drive. CHRISTMASTIDE was taken up sharply when in close quarters at the far turn, was under restraint to the stretch and hung after moving up. MARK UP came to the inside in the stretch and closed mildly. WINTERBERRY was closest to AVIATION early and stopped. NOMIC was off slowly and lacked speed. CONNIE MORSE was through early.

FOURTH RACE—Pimlico Spring Maiden Steeplechase. Two miles. Purse, $3500 added. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:47. Winner, Mrs. E. TROUGH HILL, $15.60, $7.20, $3.80; ALLIER, $3.80, $2.80; LADY JANICE, $4.00.

TROUGH HILL always forwardly placed, set and forced the pace with BIG SUN, assumed a long lead when the latter was eliminated and won in a common gallop. ALLIER lacked early speed, responded to pressure and closed with good energy. LADY JANICE was not a threat at any stage. DAREDINE was unable to keep up and was weary at the end. THE HEIR ran off the course approaching the second fence and carried NIGHT LEGEND out with him. CANFORD fell at the fourth. FIRE HIGH lost his rider at the eighth. BIG SUN lost his rider at the thirteenth.

FIFTH RACE—The Pimlico Nursery Stakes. Five furlongs. Purse, $7500 added. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:15½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's b. c. (2) by Equator—Long Bit by Ladkin. Trained by F. W. Case. Value, $3095. Time, 1:01⅘.

EQUIBIT, $25.00, $4.80, $2.20; BRANDY PUNCH, $2.60, $2.20; REALTOR, $2.20.

EQUIBIT lacked early speed, came to the outside in the stretch, responded to punishment and won going away. BRANDY PUNCH came to the outside of the leaders entering the stretch, wore down REALTOR but could not resist the winner. REALTOR went to the front in the opening furlongs, drew clear but tried gamely at the end. FRENCHTOWN showed early foot and then weakened. SPURETTE was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $3500. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50½. Winner, L. Sesa's b. g. (7) by Taj Akbar—Marcia by Teddy . Trained by L. Sesas. Value, $2275. Time, 1:14⅘.

MANOLA, $230.20, $57.60, $19.60; INCLINE, $4.60, $3.40; NED CANRON, $4.80.

MANOLA went to the front at once, drew clear, was vigorously handled and held on with good courage. INCLINE, slow to begin, came to the outside when placed to pressure and closed willingly. NED CANRON saved ground while bettering his position, came between horses in the stretch and closed gamely. UNCLE DOC was a forward factor, saved ground and tired gradually at the close. SNOW KING II could not threaten. CYPER had early speed and tired. DRUM MAJOR showed nothing.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. The Tom Mellon. Purse, $4000. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:17. Winner, W. Y. LORD CALVERT, $8.80, $4.00, $3.00; BOSSINEY, $5.40, $3.80; MISTER CHAT, $5.60.

LORD CALVERT was rated closest to the pace of BOSSINEY, rallied when placed to a drive, disposed of the leader and drew out at the end. BOSSINEY forged to the front early, drew far out but could not resist the winner and tired at the close. MISTER CHAT, in a good position throughout, rallied when shaken up and closed willingly. BUTLER raced evenly and showed a fair effort. SPLIT THE WIND weakened.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $3500. For 3-year-olds; claiming prices $5000 to $4000. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:47. Off 5:48. Winner, Mrs. C. A. Carlisle's ch. g. (3) by Haltal—Lady Gibson by Marvex. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value, $2275. Time, 1:49⅘.

GLIB LADY, $8.00, $5.40, $3.80; LUMP SUGAR, $9.20, $6.40; RENO, $7.40.

GLIB LADY was steadied while well placed early, responded when shaken up, wore down Reno to take command and was under pressure at the end. LUMP SUGAR, restrained to stretch, came wide, closed with bold rush. RENO, forwardly placed from start, moved to front between horses in stretch then weakened in final 70 yards. DRAW ONE, away in first flight and a contender to stretch, tired badly at end. DECOUPAGE came to outside to improve position sharply and ran out entering stretch. THUNDER closed gamely between horses. SEBO was hustled early and weakened.

STEVE CANYON

WELL, CLOUDY CANYON, DO YOU ALWAYS KEEP YOUR WOMEN WAITING FOR GOODBYE KISSES?
AS THEY SAY IN FRENCH, DELTA, A BIRD IN THE HAND THAT QUICK MIGHT BE A NO-JOY DECOY!
IF THE MAN WANTS A BUILDUP, THEN I SAY, LEAVE THERE BE A BUILDUP! ANGLE ME AN ELBOW, HIGH FELLA, AND LET'S GO DANCING WHERE IT'S THROBBY!
WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS BIG RED'S PLACE—RIGHT WHERE WE ARE?
I'M WRONG WITH IT, CANYON! SHALL WE LEAVE IT AT THAT—OR ARE YOU GOING TO FORCE BOTH OF US TO LIE MORE THAN I ALREADY HAVE?
OKAY—I WON'T PRESS YOU...
COME, NOW, CANYON, LET'S NOT CARRY IT THAT FAR!

JOE PALOOKA

MERCIFUL HEAVENS... IS IT BAD... OH DEAR, OH DEAR.
NO, NOW PLEASE DON'T WORRY... IT'S A SMALL FRACTURE OF THE TIBIA.
OH DEAR, WHAT'S THAT... DAD, WHY DIDN'T THEY TAKE YOU IN THE HOUSE... ARE YOU IN PAIN, DARLING?
THAT MUST BE HIS CAR PULLIN' IN THE DRIVE.
NOT MUCH, MOM... JUNE SAID I HAD TO STAY QUIET TILL THE DOCTOR CAME.
HELLO THERE... WHAT SORT OF ACROBATICS HAVE YOU BEEN TRYING, MR. OGILVIE?
HI, DOC.

MICKEY FINN

PHIL SAID HE'D BE STOPPIN' AT THE HOTEL WHERE THE CONVENTION IS BEING HELD—AND I HEAR IT'S THE SWANKIEST ONE DOWN THERE!
AW—HE'S FULL OF MALARKEY! HE'LL PROBABLY STAY AT SOME CHEAP ROOMIN' HOUSE—AND EAT NOTHIN' BUT HOT DOGS!
WE'VE GIVEN YOU A VERY NICE DOUBLE ROOM, MR. FINN—ON THE 14TH FLOOR!
THE 14TH FLOOR? THE CONVENTION IS BEING HELD IN THE BALLROOM ON THE SECOND FLOOR, ISN'T IT?
THAT'S CORRECT, SIR!
WELL, HAVEN'T YOU GOT A ROOM ON THAT FLOOR?
JUST A SUITE, SIR! —AND THE RATE IS $ 30.00 A DAY!
I'LL TAKE IT!

PENNY

IT'S A DEFINITELY DIVINE JACKET, JILL.
IT'S UTTERLY LUSH!
DO YOU LIKE THE SLACKS?
THEY'RE FROM OUT OF SPACE!
BUT SNORTING!
WEEPERS, JILL WEARS A DIFFERENT JACKET AND SLACKS NEARLY EVERY DAY!
SHE'S THE BEST DRESSED GIRL IN TOWN.

MARY WORTH

WE WERE JUST··REHEARSING A SCENE FROM MISS BRICKER'S "SIDEWALK CAFE" SCRIPT, MR. BARON!
CONGRATULATIONS, MR. MASON!··YOU SEEM TO BE MAKING FAST PROGRESS··WITH YOUR WORK!
EXCELLENT! I'LL MAKE AN APPOINTMENT WITH MR. J. CASHMAN FLINT, OUR CLIENT! EVER MET FLINT?
NO·
QUITE AN EXPERIENCE! BETTER WEAR YOUR ELEPHANT HIDE ENSEMBLE!··HIS BITE IS JUST AS BAD AS HIS BARK!

TONIGHT'S BROADCAST OF MISS WHISPER'S VOICE MUST BE PUBLICIZED NATIONALLY—ESPECIALLY IN RURAL AREAS WHERE MOST PAPERS ARE WEEKLIES.
CAN DO.!
MEANWHILE
SNATCHING THAT RECORD SHOULD BE A CINCH! IT'S DEXTER'S ONLY CLUE TO MISS WHISPER, SO HE'LL PAY PLENTY FOR ITS RETURN!
PAY! A BEAUTIFUL WORD, WISHBONE!

OH, SURE—ALL AGES!
ALL AGES, HUH? I SUPPOSE YOU CHARGE MORE AS THEY GROW OLDER, DON'T YOU?
OH, NOT NECESSARILY·
I DON'T CHARGE ANYTHING IF THEY'RE AS OLD AS I AM···
--ESPECIALLY IF THEY'RE BOYS!

THE DISTRICT LINE

by W. E. G.

CRITIC

Harold B. Hughes of 1324 Fort Stevens dr. nw., is a versatile sort of guy.

When he has a pet peeve, he can express himself in a sketch as well as in rhyme.

Currently, Harold shudders at the thought of overly-large women who wear slacks, and the result is this:

Girls' slacks are accepted, my pet,
And I do admire those who get
Appreciative glances
While wearing pantses—
But I've never met any yet.

INFORMATION PLEASE

Sydney H. Kasper of 1424 Somerset pl. nw., is a transplanted Chicagoan who wants to get hep to local pronunciations.

He wants to know whether it's Mount Rain-NEER or Mount RAIN-yer? Is it Kal-MY-a or KAL-mia? And should one say Buck-ing-ham or Bucking-um?

In his native city, Reader Kasper is more at home. He says "it's definitely NOT pronounced 'Tschicago.'"

ATTENTION, HACKERS

E. de Beer de Laer arrived here from Belgium a couple of days ago, on a mission for his government. He's scheduled to return to Belgium on Sunday.

He took a cab from National Airport to the Washington Hotel and then (failing to get a room there) another cab from the Washington to the Parkside.

Some place along the line he left his briefcase behind—probably in one of the cabs.

In the briefcase are letters (written in French (not Belgian). Two are written on yellow paper and one on green, which should make identification rather easy.

The person who found the briefcase is asked to contact Mrs. Riger at the International Red Cross (COlumbia 7307) right away.

DOWN THE AVENUE

If your're looking for a novel present for the kids, try one of the weather balloons now being offered as surplus for 50 cents . . . Age of specialization: Four men cleaning a streetcar switch at 14th and the Avenue. One with a long iron bar, one with a broom, one with a can of oily looking fluid and the fourth with a red flag . . . The tired looking Packards waiting for sightseeing customers (who will soon stop coming here in such large numbers. The rubberneck season ends with the warm weather) . . . The all-day parkers who arrive with the crack of dawn to grab favored spots in the Ellipse . . . Nonstrikers at O'Donnell's going to work without crossing picket lines (because the pickets don't show up until after the place is open for business) . . . The steady stream of girls emerging from office buildings after 9 a. m. to get a bite of breakfast after first having checked in.

IT'S ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

The city desk got a call yesterday from a woman who seemed to be trying to settle an argument.

She wanted to know whether this is the nineteenth or the twentieth century.

The desk informed her that this is the twentieth century—but apparently that wasn't the answer she wanted to hear. In a puzzled voice she asked:

"Just how do they figure that?"

If you think that was a strange call, you should have been around last week when the Sports Department got a call for Walter Haight.

"Walter is in Louisville, at the Derby," was the reply. "Can anyone else help you?"

"No," answered the voice dejectedly, "I haven't been getting my Star for the past few days, and I wanted to see if he could help me get the delivery mixup straightened out."

"The Star!" exclaimed our sports department. "This is The Post. Haight works for The Post."

"I know," snapped the voice, "but I called the Star and I couldn't get any satisfaction there."

Grin and Bear It

"Does the full coverage in the policy you sold us include breaking the news to my husband?"

The Bridge Deck

You are defending today's four-heart contract and your partner, West, opens the king of diamonds. How do you play?

The bidding:

1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

East sets South's four-heart contract by setting up a club ruff. He sees his side can win two diamond tricks since declarer probably has another diamond and the ace of trumps. Since West is marked with the diamond queen of his opening lead East can easily set up a club ruff for the fourth trick.

He overtakes his partner's king with the ace and shifts to the singleton club. Declarer wins on the board and leads a heart. East taking the ace. Now East puts West in with the queen of diamonds and a club return gives him the ruff for down one. South loses two diamonds, a heart and a club ruff.

Without the ruff declarer will lose only three tricks to win his heart game.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

YOU ARE SURE THAT RYAN'S UNDERCOVER AGENTS WILL DISCOVER NO MORE THAN WHAT I OVERHEARD REPORTED TO HIM BY PHONE IN LEE'S HOTEL ROOM?
QUITE SURE! THEY MERELY PICKED UP THE TRAIL OF SOMEONE WHO VISITED THE CAFES AND PURCHASED OLD BITS OF INFORMATION FROM PETTY INFORMERS.
HOWEVER, SINCE I NEED NOT RETURN TO MY USUAL HAUNTS, THEIR TRAIL WILL LEAD NOWHERE.
THEN YOU HAVE ALL THE INFORMATION YOU NEED?
I KNOW THE STRENGTH AND LOCATIONS OF ALL GARRISONS, THE IDENTITY OF THOSE OFFICIALS OPEN TO BRIBE OFFERS, AND THE BACK COUNTRY ELEMENTS WHO WILL SUPPORT ME.
IT SOUNDS VERY EFFICIENT. WHAT COMES NEXT?
NEXT, MY DEAR, I'M AFRAID I SHALL HAVE TO BECOME QUITE ACTIVE.

The Stars May Tell

The moon is really bright tonight . . . And all the stars are there . . . As though they were my messengers . . . To tell you that I care . . . I wish we were together now . . . Instead of far apart . . . So I could let you know how much . . . I love you in my heart . . . But maybe all those silver stars . . . Reach out beyond the sea . . . And maybe when you gaze at them . . . You will remember me . . . For I have blown a loving kiss . . . To each of them for you . . . To let you know that while I wait . . . I am forever true . . . And just to say sincerely that . . . wherever you may go . . . My heart will always follow you . . . Because I love you so.

Life's LITTLE DRAMAS as told to BART HODGES

HAL ROACH
. . . Motion Picture Pioneer

My big worry during my first directing assignment was that the old hands who assisted me would immediately discover my greenness.

I was particularly concerned with my cameraman, Fred Jackman. He looked as though he had grown up in the business. He wore his cap backward and covered his legs with puttees.

I copied his professional mannerisms and consulted him constantly during the first morning, but always guarded my speech, using the most technical terms I knew.

Came the big scene of the day, Harold Lloyd, our star, had to roll down a long, steep, rocky incline. He rolled and bounced and hit the bottom bruised and battered.

Next morning we showed the rushes. And it looked like Harold was rolling on level ground! Unaware of camera angles, we had accidentally straightened out the incline and poor Harold would have to roll all over again.

The error played on my conscience. I took the cameraman aside. "Fred," I said meekly, "I have a confession to make. I've never directed a picture before."

Fred looked at me sheepishly for a second or two. "Hal," he said, "I've a confession to make, too. I never worked on a camera in my life before yesterday."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

STEVE CANYON

WELL, CLOUDY CANYON, DO YOU ALWAYS KEEP YOUR WOMEN WAITING FOR GOODBYE KISSES?
IF THE MAN WANTS A BUILDUP, THEN I SAY, LEAVE THERE BE A BUILDUP! ANGLE ME AN ELBOW, HIGH FELLA, AND LET'S GO DANCING WHERE IT'S THROBBY!
WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS BIG RED'S PLACE—RIGHT WHERE WE ARE?
I'M WRONG WITH IT, CANYON! SHALL WE LEAVE IT AT THAT—OR ARE YOU GOING TO FORCE BOTH OF US TO LIE MORE THAN I ALREADY HAVE?
OKAY—I WON'T PRESS YOU...
COME, NOW, CANYON, LET'S NOT CARRY IT THAT FAR!

JOE PALOOKA

MERCIFUL HEAVENS... IS IT BAD... OH DEAR, OH DEAR.
NO, NOW PLEASE DON'T WORRY... IT'S A SMALL FRACTURE OF THE TIBIA.
OH DEAR, WHAT'S THAT... DAD, WHY DIDN'T THEY TAKE YOU IN THE HOUSE... ARE YOU IN PAIN, DARLING?
THAT MUST BE HIS CAR PULLIN' IN THE DRIVE.
NOT MUCH, MOM... JUNE SAID I HAD TO STAY QUIET TILL THE DOCTOR CAME.
HELLO THERE... WHAT SORT OF ACROBATICS HAVE YOU BEEN TRYING, MR. OGILVIE?
HI, DOC.

MICKEY FINN

PHIL SAID HE'D BE STOPPIN' AT THE HOTEL WHERE THE CONVENTION IS BEING HELD—AND I HEAR IT'S THE SWANKIEST ONE DOWN THERE!
AW—HE'S FULL OF MALARKEY! HE'LL PROBABLY STAY AT SOME CHEAP ROOMIN' HOUSE—AND EAT NOTHIN' BUT HOT DOGS!
WE'VE GIVEN YOU A VERY NICE DOUBLE ROOM, MR. FINN—ON THE 14TH FLOOR!
THE 14TH FLOOR? THE CONVENTION IS BEING HELD IN THE BALLROOM ON THE SECOND FLOOR, ISN'T IT?
THAT'S CORRECT, SIR!
WELL, HAVEN'T YOU GOT A ROOM ON THAT FLOOR?
JUST A SUITE, SIR! —AND THE RATE IS $ 30.00 A DAY!
I'LL TAKE IT!

PENNY

IT'S UTTERLY LUSH!
DO YOU LIKE THE SLACKS?
THEY'RE FROM OUT OF SPACE!
BUT SNORTING!
WEEPERS, JILL WEARS A DIFFERENT JACKET AND SLACKS NEARLY EVERY DAY!
SHE'S THE BEST DRESSED GIRL IN TOWN.

MARY WORTH

WE WERE JUST··REHEARSING A SCENE FROM MISS BRICKER'S "SIDEWALK CAFE" SCRIPT, MR. BARON!
CONGRATULATIONS, MR. MASON!··YOU SEEM TO BE MAKING FAST PROGRESS··WITH YOUR WORK!
NO·

WINNIE WINKLE

BUT HOW ABOUT TH' BALL GAME?
YOU MAY BE TH' MANAGER OF TH' TEAM, BUT I'M CHIEF OF TH' FIRE DEPARTMENT, SO COME ON!
BALL GAME TODAY
WONDER WHERE T'IS?
CLANG CLANG
GOOD GOSH! LOOKS LIKE IT'S·····
IT IS!! TH' FIREHOUSE IS BURNING!

SUPERMAN

TONIGHT'S BROADCAST OF MISS WHISPER'S VOICE MUST BE PUBLICIZED NATIONALLY—ESPECIALLY IN RURAL AREAS WHERE MOST PAPERS ARE WEEKLIES.
MEANWHILE
SNATCHING THAT RECORD SHOULD BE A CINCH! IT'S DEXTER'S ONLY CLUE TO MISS WHISPER, SO HE'LL PAY PLENTY FOR ITS RETURN!
PAY! A BEAUTIFUL WORD, WISHBONE!

DOTTY

OH, SURE—ALL AGES!
ALL AGES, HUH? I SUPPOSE YOU CHARGE MORE AS THEY GROW OLDER, DON'T YOU?
OH, NOT NECESSARILY—
I DON'T CHARGE ANYTHING IF THEY'RE AS OLD AS I AM···
—ESPECIALLY IF THEY'RE BOYS!

CRITIC

Harold B. Hughes of 1324 Fort Stevens dr. nw., is a versatile sort of guy.

When he has a pet peeve, he can express himself in a sketch as well as in rhyme.

Currently, Harold shudders at the thought of overly-large women who wear slacks, and the result is this:

Girls' slacks are accepted, my pet,
And I do admire those who get
Appreciative glances
While wearing pantses—
But I've never met any yet.

INFORMATION PLEASE

Sydney H. Kasper of 1424 Somerset pl. nw., is a transplanted Chicagoan who wants to get hep to local pronunciations.

He wants to know whether it's Mount Rain-NEER or Mount RAIN-yer? Is it Kal-MY-a or KAL-mia? And should one say Buck-ing-ham or Bucking-um?

In his native city, Reader Kasper is more at home. He says "it's definitely NOT pronounced 'Tschicago.'"

ATTENTION, HACKERS

E. de Beer de Laer arrived here from Belgium a couple of days ago, on a mission for his government. He's scheduled to return to Belgium on Sunday.

He took a cab from National Airport to the Washington Hotel and then (failing to get a room there) another cab from the Washington to the Parkside.

Some place along the line he left his briefcase behind—probably in one of the cabs.

In the briefcase are letters (written in French (not Belgian). Two are written on yellow paper and one on green, which should make identification rather easy.

DOWN THE AVENUE

If your're looking for a novel present for the kids, try one of the weather balloons now being offered as surplus for 50 cents . . . Age of specialization: Four men cleaning a streetcar switch at 14th and the Avenue. One with a long iron bar, one with a broom, one with a can of oily looking fluid and the fourth with a red flag . . . The tired looking Packards waiting for sightseeing customers (who will soon stop coming here in such large numbers. The rubberneck season ends with the warm weather) . . . The all-day parkers who arrive with the crack of dawn to grab favored spots in the Ellipse . . . Nonstrikers at O'Donnell's going to work without crossing picket lines (because the pickets don't show up until after the place is open for business) . . . The steady stream of girls emerging from office buildings after 9 a. m. to get a bite of breakfast after first having checked in.

IT'S ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

The city desk got a call yesterday from a woman who seemed to be trying to settle an argument.

She wanted to know whether this is the nineteenth or the twentieth century.

The desk informed her that this is the twentieth century—but apparently that wasn't the answer she wanted to hear. In a puzzled voice she asked:

"Just how do they figure that?"

If you think that was a strange call, you should have been around last week when the Sports Department got a call for Walter Haight.

"Walter is in Louisville, at the Derby," was the reply. "Can anyone else help you?"

"No," answered the voice dejectedly, "I haven't been getting my Star for the past few days, and I wanted to see if he could help me get the delivery mixup straightened out."

"The Star!" exclaimed our sports department. "This is The Post. Haight works for The Post."

"I know," snapped the voice, "but I called the Star and I couldn't get any satisfaction there."

Grin and Bear It

"Does the full coverage in the policy you sold us include breaking the news to my husband?"

Bridge

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

You are defending today's four-heart contract and your partner, West, opens the king of diamonds. How do you play?

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable

NORTH DEALER

♠ K J 9
♡ K 10 7 4
◇ J 8 5
♣ A Q 10

WEST: ♠ 8 3, ♡ 3, ◇ K Q 10 7, ♣ K 7 6 5 3 2
NORTH: ♠ 10 6 5 4 2, ♡ A 5 2, ◇ A 6 4 3, ♣ 9
SOUTH: ♠ A Q 7, ♡ Q J 9 8 6, ◇ 9 2, ♣ J 8 4

The bidding:

1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

East sets South's four-heart contract by setting up a club ruff. He sees his side can win two diamond tricks since declarer probably has another diamond and the ace of trumps. Since West is marked with the diamond queen of his opening lead East can easily set up a club ruff for the fourth trick.

He overtakes his partner's king with the ace and shifts to the singleton club. Declarer wins on the board and leads a heart. East taking the ace. Now East puts West in with the queen of diamonds and a club return gives him the ruff for down one. South loses two diamonds, a heart and a club ruff.

Without the ruff declarer will lose only three tricks to win his heart game.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

YOU ARE SURE THAT RYAN'S UNDERCOVER AGENTS WILL DISCOVER NO MORE THAN WHAT I OVERHEARD REPORTED TO HIM BY PHONE IN LEE'S HOTEL ROOM?
QUITE SURE! THEY MERELY PICKED UP THE TRAIL OF SOMEONE WHO VISITED THE CAFES AND PURCHASED OLD BITS OF INFORMATION FROM PETTY INFORMERS.
HOWEVER, SINCE I NEED NOT RETURN TO MY USUAL HAUNTS, THEIR TRAIL WILL LEAD NOWHERE.
THEN YOU HAVE ALL THE INFORMATION YOU NEED?
I KNOW THE STRENGTH AND LOCATIONS OF ALL GARRISONS, THE IDENTITY OF THOSE OFFICIALS OPEN TO BRIBE OFFERS, AND THE BACK COUNTRY ELEMENTS WHO WILL SUPPORT ME.
IT SOUNDS VERY EFFICIENT. WHAT COMES NEXT?
NEXT, MY DEAR, I'M AFRAID I SHALL HAVE TO BECOME QUITE ACTIVE.

The Stars May Tell

The moon is really bright tonight . . . And all the stars are there . . . As though they were my messengers . . . To tell you that I care . . . I wish we were together now . . . Instead of far apart . . . So I could let you know how much . . . I love you in my heart . . . But maybe all those silver stars . . . Reach out beyond the sea . . . And maybe when you gaze at them . . . You will remember me . . . For I have blown a loving kiss . . . To each of them for you . . . To let you know that while I wait . . . I am forever true . . . And just to say sincerely that . . . wherever you may go . . . My heart will always follow you . . . Because I love you so.

Life's LITTLE DRAMAS as told to BART HODGES

HAL ROACH
. . . Motion Picture Pioneer

My big worry during my first directing assignment was that the old hands who assisted me would immediately discover my greenness.

I was particularly concerned with my cameraman, Fred Jackman. He looked as though he had grown up in the business. He wore his cap backward and covered his legs with puttees.

I copied his professional mannerisms and consulted him constantly during the first morning, but always guarded my speech, using the most technical terms I knew.

Came the big scene of the day, Harold Lloyd, our star, had to roll down a long, steep, rocky incline. He rolled and bounced and hit the bottom bruised and battered.

Next morning we showed the rushes. And it looked like Harold was rolling on level ground! Unaware of camera angles, we had accidentally straightened out the incline and poor Harold would have to roll all over again.

The error played on my conscience. I took the cameraman aside. "Fred," I said meekly, "I have a confession to make. I've never directed a picture before."

Fred looked at me sheepishly for a second or two. "Hal," he said, "I've a confession to make, too. I never worked on a camera in my life before yesterday."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Family Friends Criticize Parents' Policy Of Giving Employed Son, 19, Free Board And Lodging; He Has Conservative Habits

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In our 21 years' marriage my husband and I have been very happy together. We have a son, 19, who recently dropped out of college in his sophomore year and took a job paying $35 a week, with excellent prospects for the future. He plans to resume his college course in night school beginning next year.

John has always been a good boy and my husband has always been very liberal about giving him spending money, on the theory that this way John would have no reason to get into trouble for lack of funds. Now that he is working he finances himself, as to clothes, recreation, etc., and at our suggestion gives me something each week to add to his savings account.

During the week he seldom goes out evenings. Saturday night is his big night, when he and a girl—or sometimes a group of boys and girls—go to the theater or a movie and then some place to eat and dance and perhaps have a drink. We think everything is working out nicely, but my friends say we are doing wrong.

'Make Him Pay,' Advisers Say

THEY SAY we should "make" John give us something each week for board and room. We feel if we needed his help and asked for it, he would give it; but since we don't, it is better for him to feel he is getting ahead by saving for the future.

If he had to pay all his expenses, including board, there would be nothing left over to save; hence he would have no incentive to work, as he's always had as much money as he needed for clothes, recreation, etc., without working for it.

We usually discuss our problems together and while we don't always agree at the start, we usually reach a satisfactory conclusion after discussing our respective ideas. Are we wrong and our friends right in this matter? I would greatly appreciate your opinion. B. F.

Lax Discussion Invites Meddling

DEAR B. F.: John's conditioning on the score of funds is a bit on the soft side, it seems; but if his behavior so far is entirely satisfactory to his parents and good by conventional standards—giving no trouble to the community—I see no reason for your friends to push in as financial advisers.

You know the proverb, "Try to please everybody and you won't please anybody." In a democratic society, how the Smiths, the Browns or the Joneses manage their family affairs is their own business provided the results are pleasing to themselves and not a threat to the general welfare. And provided also, of course, they keep their own counsel with proper dignity.

Doubtless you've opened the door to disparaging interference by talking too much to cronies about John, his job, his habits, his plans, his new system of saving, etc., ad infinitum—a form of conversation to which most mothers of "only" children are unfortunately addicted.

Responsibility Is Beneficial

AS MATTERS stand, there's nothing wrong in giving John free board and lodging. If he were some years older, had finished college and were settled in a job, that would be a different story. In that case I should say he ought to accept the discipline of paying his way in full. But for the present your warm hearted backing gives him a fine example to copy in future years, if he has children.

However, I think you're verging on a mistake in doing his banking for him. Since it is agreed that he is to save so much a week, why isn't he vested with responsibility to keep the pledge? The business of his handing the money over to you puts it on the level of "penny into piggy-bank" transaction. As if you thought he couldn't manage without mama to supervise.

That's arresting his development, insidiously making him dependent on leading strings. In my opinion, it were better judgment, potentially more beneficial to his character, to put him on notice that positive reliable independent practise of thrift is now in order—because in keeping with his new status as a substantial wage earner—and let him handle the details, giving him the benefit of a parental check-up and steering advices (if needed) periodically. M. H.
